Havana, April 5.—Jess Willard is now champion heavyweight pugilist of the world, winning the title by knocking out Jack Johnson in the 26th round here this evening.

By Associated Press.
Havana, Cuba, April 5.—The day of the world's heavyweight championship fight between Jack Johnson and Jess Willard, broke with overcast skies in Havana, and a decided cool wind blowing in from the sea. Havana has been stirred by this event more than by any other thing of recent years, and dawn found the city fully awake to the unusual occurrence of the day. The downtown fight headquarters were crowded with ticket buyers and the morning saw the arrival in Havana of wealthy Cubans from all over the island.

Johnson prepared coolly to defend his title. His only indications of nervousness, were over the exact moment the backers of the fight would arrive at his headquarters with the $30,000, named in the negro's contract as signed in Paris. This very important event was set for 11 o'clock.

Johnson chatted and laughed as if he had not a care in the world. This supreme self confidence is rated as one of the champion's best assets. It was apparent that Willard was about to discuss his plan of campaign. He did say, however, that he proposed to go slow, and that he expected to take a good deal of punishment during the first ten rounds, hoping to wear Johnson down and get an opportunity to land a knock-out blow.

Ringside, Oriental Park, Havana, April 5.—The sun broke through a cloudy overcast sky as the crowds began to arrive at the scene of the world heavyweight championship fight, between Jack Johnson, of Texas, and Jess Willard, of Kansas, at the race track here.

Ringside box seats sold for $25; grandstand seats, $15, and general admission was $3. In addition spectators paid $1 for the races after the fight. Five moving picture machines were focused on the ring.

Cuban troops began to reach the track at half past ten, and several companies of infantry and two troops of cavalry were on the scene. The attendance is estimated at about 15,000.

The sun began to beat down hotly and all danger of rain seemed past. The first five rounds were the scheduled length of the fight, but few of the thousands who gathered, entertained a passing belief that it would last that long. There was little preliminary betting; almost everyone apparently waiting for an eleventh hour shift in the odds. Johnson was

Thirteenth Round.
Willard's body was red from his punishment in the 13th. The negro continued to play for the stomach. Willard drove Johnson to a corner and landed straight in his face. The negro jarred Willard with a left hook to the jaw.

Fourteenth Round.
The 14th opened with Willard rushing and trying to force the fighting. Johnson slammed Willard in the mouth, but the cowboy laughed. The negro was beginning to miss his leads.

Fifteenth Round.
The crowd kidded Johnson who rushed Willard to the ropes and scored hard swings, remarking "what a grand old man." Willard grinned.

Sixteenth Round.
Johnson missed a left to the head and they clinched. Willard blocked the negro's rush. The black man said "Willard is a good kid," and then rushed him to the ropes, scoring twice on the cowboy's body. The negro drove a terrific swing to Willard's side. The challenger was a trifle unsteady in going to his corner.

Seventeenth Round.
Johnson hooked a left and a right uppercut to Willard's jaw. Willard landed a right on Johnson's body. Jack drove Willard to a corner and landed two swings to the head. Johnson hooked a right to the body and followed up with two punches to the head.

Eighteenth Round.
After playing a tattoo on Willard's chest and stomach the negro drove Willard to a corner and smashed him twice on the jaw. Willard's leads were easily picked off by the champion. Willard landed a straight left to Johnson's face and a right swing to the jaw.

Nineteenth Round.
Both men slowed up a bit. Willard was not the aggressor. Johnson stood in the middle of the ring and blocked Willard's blows.

Twentieth Round.
Willard opened the round with two light blows to the negro's face.

Twenty-first Round.
After a minute of feinting Johnson hooked a left to the body and sent right swing to head. Willard sent a straight left to the face. They clinched. Willard missed a right swing and both laughed.

Twenty-second Round.
The fight had degenerated into slow sparring and clinching battle. Neither appeared tired or injured. Johnson grinned when Willard battled hard in a clinch and worked for the negro's stomach. Johnson showed effect of pain.

Twenty-sixth Round.
Johnson was looking over his shoulder at his wife when Willard caught him on the jaw and knocked him out in the 26th.

Chicago, April 5.—United States District Attorney Clynne announced today that the government had stationed men at the ringside of the Johnson-Willard fight in Havana. He refused to go into details regarding the presence of the secret service men there.

"Sensational developments may be announced later in the day," he said. Johnson, who is under conviction on the charge of having violated the Mann white slave act, has been trailed by federal agents, it was learned from another source.

TO ASSIST THE GERMANS

Sofia, April 5.—All indications available point unmistakably to the fact that decisive events are pending, and intervention by Bulgaria is expected momentarily. The feeling of suspense is widespread throughout the country. Preparations for war are being personally supervised by the king and a state of siege is being rigidly enforced. Because of this and the secrecy with which preparations are being made the government's intentions are not entirely known. There is no doubt, however, that the general hatred felt toward Greece and Serbia equals that of Turkey for those countries. The government's relations with Roumania are very much improved. Reports say that half a million men have been secretly mobilized.

SUNK BY MINE IN BLACK SEA

Turkish Armored Cruiser Medjidieh Reported Destroyed.

AUSTRIAN SHIP ALSO BLOWN UP

Russians Claim an Important Victory in the Battle For Possession of the Carpathian Passes—Retreat of the Austrian Forces Admitted by Vienna—Germans Make Slight Gain in Belgium—The Day's Operations.

London, April 5.—The Turkish armored cruiser Medjidieh was sunk by a mine in the Black sea, according to a dispatch from the Russian capital.

The Medjidieh was a member of the Turkish Black sea fleet which has attacked Russian ports on several occasions and sunk Russian vessels. On Jan. 31 it was announced at Petrograd that the Medjidieh, with the Turkish cruiser Midirli, formerly the German cruiser Breslau, had been discovered near Samsoen by the Russian fleet, but escaped after a long pursuit.

The Medjidieh was an American-built ship, having been laid down in Philadelphia in 1903. She was not a large vessel and her armament was comparatively light. She was 331 feet long and 42 feet beam and had a displacement of 3,432 tons. She was armed with two 6-inch guns, eight 4.7-inch guns, six three-pounders six one-pounders and two torpedo tubes. Her complement was 302 men.

Thirty-five members of the crew were drowned by the destruction of the unidentified Austrian war vessel which blew up in the Danube, after striking a mine near Ritopek, according to a dispatch from Nish.

A Russian bark, whose name has not been learned, was torpedoed in the channel. The crew was saved.

Russia Scores Victory.

Austrian forces were defeated by the Russians in the Beskid region. It is held to be the most important single victory in the battle for the Carpathian passes. It is the opinion of the British military experts that the Austro-German forces will have to retire to the mountains south of the Carpathian range and make another effort to prevent the Russian armies, and particularly the Cossacks, from swarming over the plains of Hungary.

Retreat of the Austrian forces in the Beskid region, where some of the heaviest fighting has taken place in the struggle for control of the mountain passes leading into Hungary, was announced at Vienna army headquarters. The Beskid mountains form part of the boundary between Hungary and Galicia. They are a section of the great Carpathian range, the natural barrier upon which Austro-Hungary relies to halt the Russian advance.

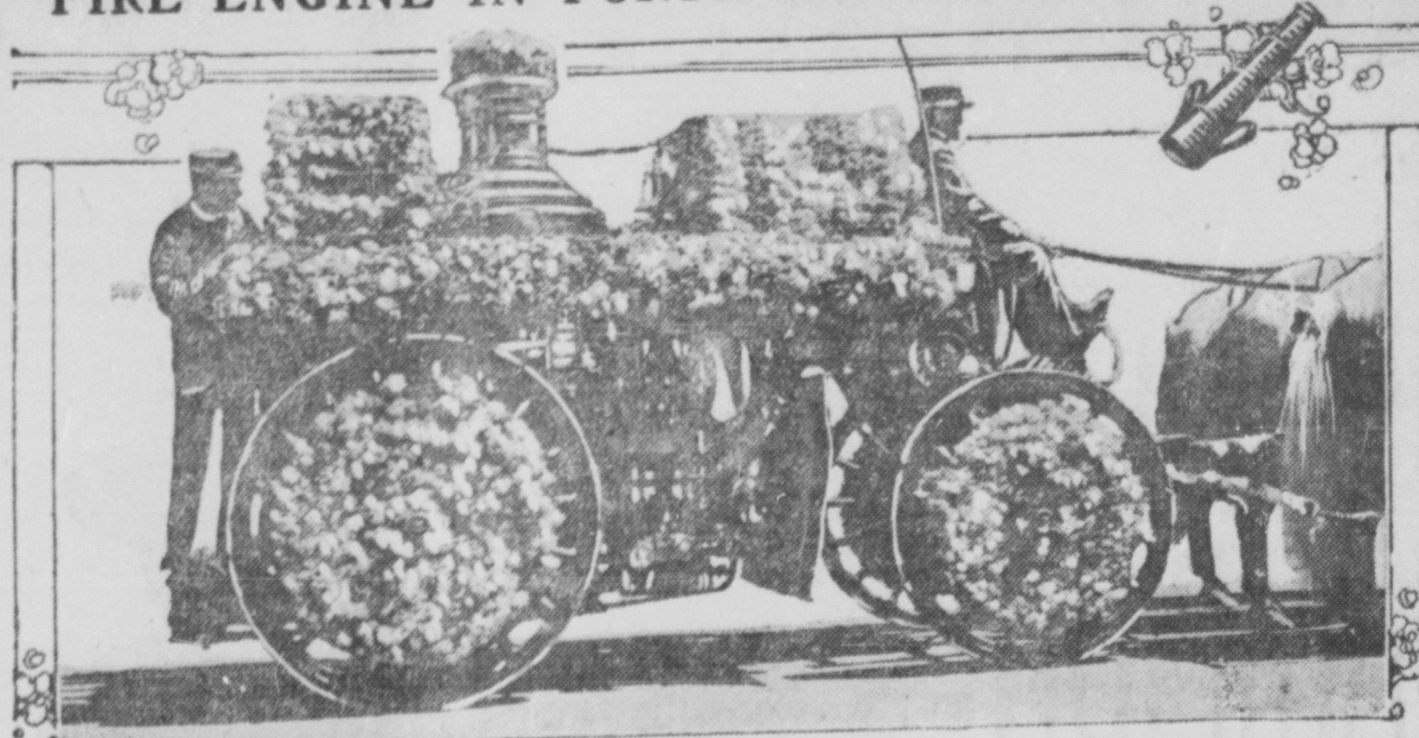

There has been fighting without pause for the past twenty-four hours on both sides of the Dukla pass. The Russians put a new reserve force into action and the fighting in the Ondova and Laborca valleys has been going on with great intensity.

The Germans have made a slight advance on the Yser front in Belgium. Fighting also continues in the forest of Le Pretre, which has been the scene of a long and sanguinary battle.

BRITISH STEAMSHIP SUNK OFF WOLF ROCK

STATE OF SIEGE IS ENFORCED

Feeling of Suspense Reported Widespread Throughout the Balkans. Bulgaria Said to Have Mobilized Half Million Men—Attack on Serbs by Bulgarians Draws Protest From Serbian Rulers.

London, April 5.—Latest reports from the Balkans indicate that a general clash is imminent at any moment. Bulgaria is practically on a war footing, and the general hatred felt toward Serbia and Greece throughout that country is becoming rapidly intensified. It is the impression here that unless some unexpected event occurs to prolong peace, Bulgaria will soon be up in arms and fighting for Germany.

The general aspect of the Balkan situation has changed speedily. Dispatches from Rome said that the Bulgarian attack upon guardsmen along the Serbian border, and which resulted in a pitched battle, was considered as a mere frontier incident, sufficient serious in itself, but unlikely to lead to an open breach or war between the two countries.

This attack, according to information from Rome, is said to have been instigated by Germany with the hope of bringing on war between Serbia and Bulgaria and thus making a complete Balkan alliance impossible.

In view of the fact, however, that Greece and Roumania are determined to intervene in behalf of Serbia, Bulgaria would naturally be loath to commit any hostile act toward Serbia and thus incur the enmity of Serbia's allies. This seemed especially to be the case because war with Serbia would leave Bulgaria in complete isolation, there being no possibility of help from Austria or Germany. The impression was general that the Bulgarian attack on the Serbian frontier guards had been in some way glossed over by the diplomats of the two countries and that all chances of complications arising out of it were averted. Later dispatches from Sofia, however, and other available points in the Balkans said flatly that the situation was viewed with the greatest alarm, and that all indications pointed unmistakably to the fact that decisive events are impending.

TURK GOVT. GETS LOAN

Paris, April 5.—A dispatch from Geneva quotes Djavid Bey, the Turkish minister of finance, as saying: "I am of the opinion that the war can not last much longer, for the Germans will be unwilling to make a second winter campaign. I expect, therefore, a definite solution before the end of October."

Djavid Bey, who arrived at Geneva from Berlin, said he had negotiated a loan of $30,000,000 in Berlin. He scoffed at the idea that the allies could force the Dardanelles or the Bosphorus. Turkey, he said, had never allowed the English to become acquainted with the new defense batteries, only the old forts, although the English were charged with training the Turkish fleet.

TURKS RESENTING GERMAN DISCIPLINE

BRINDISI, April 5.—Refugees arriving here from Turkey report that the anti-German hostility in the Turkish army is now verging on mutiny. The soldiers resent the German discipline, which is enforced by horsewhipping. Cases of insubordination are very frequent. An attempt was recently made to assassinate a German colonel in Constantinople and another officer was mysteriously shot. Several officers have been murdered in the Caucasus.

WILL BE INTERNED

Washington, April 5.—The opinion was expressed in official circles that the internment of the German sealer, the Prinz Elzei Friedrich, may be looked for in a few days. Most officials here have been convinced since the Elzei arrived at Newport News for repairs that she would never leave that port during the war. When she failed to take advantage of the unusually thick weather and gales of Friday night and Saturday to make a dash for the sea they were more than ever satisfied that she has no intention of trying to get away, but will intern as soon as the time allowed her by the United States for repairs has expired.

GERMANS CAPTURE TOWN NEAR YSER

Berlin, April 5.—The war office announcement says: "On the Yser canal, south of Dixmude, German troops occupied the village of Drei Grachten, on the western bank, which was held by the Belgians. Several French charges in the forest of Lepetra were repulsed. Russian attacks near Augustowo were repulsed."

FIGHTING IN CARPATHIANS

London, April 5.—The following Austrian official statement was given out in Vienna: "In the Carpathians the hill engagement on each side of the Laborca valley continues. A counter attack made from the adjacent western hills repulsed the enemy from several positions. Eastward of Virawa strong Russian attacks have been repulsed. The fighting secured 2,200 Russian prisoners. North of the Uzok pass the situation is unchanged. A Russian attack failed after a short engagement."

NOTES TO BE MADE PUBLIC

Washington, April 5.—Secretary Bryan announced that arrangements have been made by Ambassador Page in London for the publication tomorrow of the American note to Great Britain and France regarding their policy of cutting off all trade from Germany. The note will be made public simultaneously in England, France and the United States. In this note the United States takes exception to the methods by which the allies propose to enforce their policy of preventing trade with Germany.

FIRE LICKS UP HOTEL IN TOLEDO

Several Lives Lost and Five Persons Badly Injured.

Toledo, April 5.—Several persons are believed to have been burned to death and five seriously injured in a fire which destroyed the Niagara hotel here. One body so far, Mrs. J. L. Frye of Adrian, Mich., has been recovered. The body was found by firemen lying on the floor in a room on the second floor. The woman had wrapped a towel about her mouth in a vain effort to save her life. A pair of trousers and shoes were also found in the room. The coroner believes they belonged to the woman's husband. The injured include Captain Tuyle of No. 3 engine company, back broken and internal injuries, who will die. The flames started in the store room of the People's Outfitting company, in the basement of the hotel. The cause is unknown. The loss is $50,000. Fire Chief Elling states ninety guests were registered. Eight are still unaccounted for.

Mr. and Mrs. Frye were married three days ago.

TO ASSIST THE GERMANS

Sofia, April 5.—All indications available point unmistakably to the fact that decisive events are pending, and intervention by Bulgaria is expected momentarily. The feeling of suspense is widespread throughout the country. Preparations for war are being personally supervised by the king and a state of siege is being rigidly enforced. Because of this and the secrecy with which preparations are being made the government's intentions are not entirely known. There is no doubt, however, that the general hatred felt toward Greece and Serbia equals that of Turkey for those countries. The government's relations with Roumania are very much improved. Reports say that half a million men have been secretly mobilized.

SUNK BY MINE IN BLACK SEA

Turkish Armored Cruiser Medjidieh Reported Destroyed.

AUSTRIAN SHIP ALSO BLOWN UP

Russians Claim an Important Victory in the Battle For Possession of the Carpathian Passes—Retreat of the Austrian Forces Admitted by Vienna—Germans Make Slight Gain in Belgium—The Day's Operations.

London, April 5.—The Turkish armored cruiser Medjidieh was sunk by a mine in the Black sea, according to a dispatch from the Russian capital.

The Medjidieh was a member of the Turkish Black sea fleet which has attacked Russian ports on several occasions and sunk Russian vessels. On Jan. 31 it was announced at Petrograd that the Medjidieh, with the Turkish cruiser Breslau, formerly the German cruiser Breslau, had been discovered near Samson by the Russian fleet, but escaped after a long pursuit.

The Medjidieh was an American-built ship, having been laid down in Philadelphia in 1903. She was not a large vessel and her armament was comparatively light. She was 331 feet long and 42 feet beam and had a displacement of 3,432 tons. She was armed with two 6-inch guns, eight 4.7-inch guns, six three-pounders six one-pounders and two torpedo tubes. Her complement was 302 men.

Thirty-five members of the crew were drowned by the destruction of the unidentified Austrian war vessel which blew up in the Danube, after striking a mine near Ritopek, according to a dispatch from Nish.

A Russian bark, whose name has not been learned, was torpedoed in the channel. The crew was saved.

Russia Scores Victory.

Austrian forces were defeated by the Russians in the Beskid region. It is held to be the most important single victory in the battle for the Carpathian passes. It is the opinion of the British military experts that the Austro-German forces will have to retire to the mountains south of the Carpathian range and make another effort to prevent the Russian armies, and particularly the Cossacks, from swarming over the plains of Hungary.

Retreat of the Austrian forces in the Beskid region, where some of the heaviest fighting has taken place in the struggle for control of the mountain passes leading into Hungary, was announced at Vienna army headquarters. The Beskid mountains form part of the boundary between Hungary and Galicia. They are a section of the great Carpathian range, the natural barrier upon which Austro-Hungary relies to halt the Russian advance.

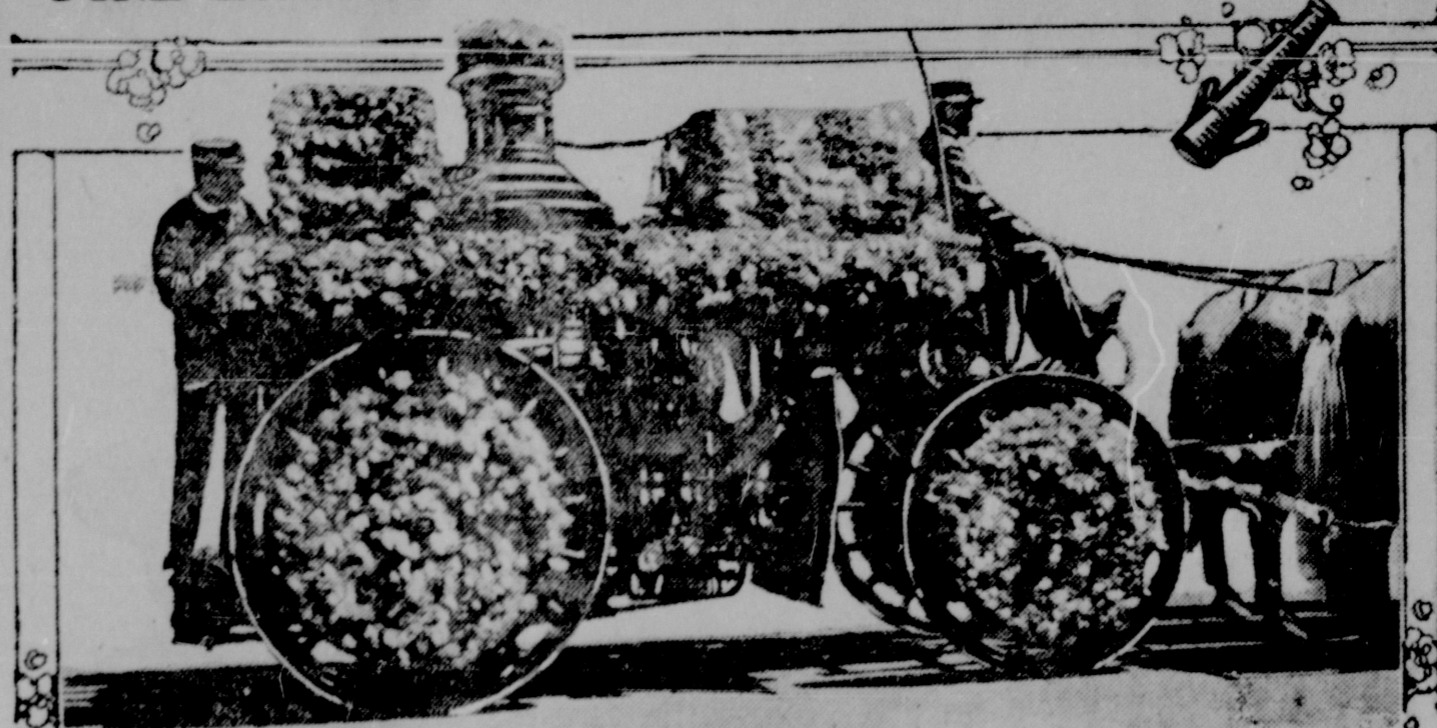

There has been fighting without pause for the past twenty-four hours on both sides of the Dukla pass. The Russians put a new reserve force into action and the fighting in the Ondova and Laboreza valleys has been going on with great intensity.

The Germans have made a slight advance on the Yser front in Belgium. Fighting also continues in the forest of Le Pretre, which has been the scene of a long and sanguinary battle.

BRITISH STEAMSHIP SUNK OFF WOLF ROCK

STATE OF SIEGE IS ENFORCED

Feeling of Suspense Reported Widespread Throughout the Balkans. Bulgaria Said to Have Mobilized Half Million Men—Attack on Serbs by Bulgarians Draws Protest From Serbian Rulers.

London, April 5.—Latest reports from the Balkans indicate that a general clash is imminent at any moment. Bulgaria is practically on a war footing, and the general hatred felt toward Serbia and Greece throughout that country is becoming rapidly intensified. It is the impression here that unless some unexpected event occurs to prolong peace, Bulgaria will soon be up in arms and fighting for Germany.

The general aspect of the Balkan situation has changed speedily. Dispatches from Rome said that the Bulgarian attack upon guardsmen along the Serbian border, and which resulted in a pitched battle, was considered as a mere frontier incident, sufficiently serious in itself, but unlikely to lead to an open breach or war between the two countries.

This attack, according to information from Rome, is said to have been instigated by Germany with the hope of bringing on war between Serbia and Bulgaria and thus making a complete Balkan alliance impossible.

In view of the fact, however, that Greece and Roumania are determined to intervene in behalf of Serbia, Bulgaria would naturally be loth to commit any hostile act toward Serbia and thus incur the enmity of Serbia's allies. This seemed especially to be the case because war with Serbia would leave Bulgaria in complete isolation, there being no possibility of help from Austria or Germany. The impression was general that the Bulgarian attack on the Serbian frontier guards had been in some way glossed over by the diplomats of the two countries and that all chances of complications arising out of it were averted. Later dispatches from Sofia, however, and other available points in the Balkans said flatly that the situation was viewed with the greatest alarm, and that all indications pointed unmistakably to the fact that decisive events are impending.

TURK GOVT. GETS LOAN

Paris, April 5.—A dispatch from Geneva quotes Djavid Bey, the Turkish minister of finance, as saying: "I am of the opinion that the war can not last much longer for the Germans will be unwilling to make a second winter campaign. I expect, therefore, a definite solution before the end of October."

Djavid Bey, who arrived at Geneva from Berlin, said he had negotiated a loan of $20,000,000 in Berlin. He scoffed at the idea that the allies could force the Dardanelles or the Bosphorus. Turkey, he said, had never allowed the English to become acquainted with the new defense batteries, only the old forts, although the English were charged with training the Turkish fleet.

TURKS RESENTING GERMAN DISCIPLINE

BRINDISI, APRIL 5.—Refugees arriving here from Turkey report that the anti-German hostility in the Turkish army is now verging on mutiny. The soldiers resent the German discipline, which is enforced by horsewhipping. Cases of insubordination are very frequent. An attempt was recently made to assassinate a German colonel in Constantinople and another officer was mysteriously shot. Several officers have been murdered in the Caucasus.

WILL BE INTERNED

Washington, April 5.—The opinion was expressed in official circles that the internment of the German sea raider, the Prinz Eitel Friedrich, may be looked for in a few days. Most officials here have been convinced since the Eitel arrived at Newport News for repairs that she would never leave that port during the war. When she failed to take advantage of the unusually thick weather and gales of Friday night and Saturday to make a dash for the sea they were more than ever satisfied that she has no intention of trying to get away, but will intern as soon as the time allowed her by the United States for repairs has expired.

GERMANS CAPTURE TOWN NEAR YSER

Berlin, April 5.—The war office announcement says: "On the Yser canal, south of Dixmude, German troops occupied the village of Drei Grachten, on the western bank, which was held by the Belgians. Several French charges in the forest of Lepretre were repulsed. Russian attacks near Augustowo were repulsed."

FIGHTING IN CARPATHIANS

London, April 5.—The following Austrian official statement was given out in Vienna: "In the Carpathians the hill engagement on each side of the Laboreza valley continues. A counter attack made from the adjacent western hills repulsed the enemy from several positions. Eastward of Virawa strong Russian attacks have been repulsed. The fighting secured 2,200 Russian prisoners. North of the Uzok pass the situation is unchanged. A Russian attack failed after a short engagement."

NOTES TO BE MADE PUBLIC

Washington, April 5.—Secretary Bryan announced that arrangements have been made by Ambassador Page in London for the publication tomorrow of the American note to Great Britain and France regarding their policy of cutting off all trade from Germany. The note will be made public simultaneously in England, France and the United States. In this note the United States takes exception to the methods by which the allies propose to enforce their policy of preventing trade with Germany.

FIRE LICKS UP HOTEL IN TOLEDO

Several Lives Lost and Five Persons Badly Injured.

Toledo, April 5.—Several persons are believed to have been burned to death and five seriously injured in a fire which destroyed the Niagara hotel here. One body so far, Mrs. J. L. Frye of Adrian, Mich., has been recovered. The body was found by firemen lying on the floor in a room on the second floor. The woman had wrapped a towel about her mouth in a vain effort to save her life. A pair of trousers and shoes were also found in the room. The coroner believes they belonged to the woman's husband. The injured include Captain Tuylt of No. 3 engine company, back broken and internal injuries, who will die. The flames started in the store room of the People's Outfitting company, in the basement of the hotel. The cause is unknown. The loss is $50,000. Fire Chief Elling states ninety guests were registered. Eight are still unaccounted for.

Mr. and Mrs. Frye were married three days ago. Vernon Gates and his son Hal of Chicago were burned so badly that they are not expected to recover.

The Mothers' Pension Law

That the law providing a pension for needy mothers was a necessity as well as a humanitarian piece of legislation is proven by the number of worthy applicants throughout the state who have made application to the courts to be granted the relief to which the law entitles them.

Hundreds of worthy mothers have been granted allowances by local courts which will enable them to keep their family together and provide the necessities of life, at least, for the little tots, who would so much miss the refining influence of home and mother if taken from home and confined in a public institution, no matter how well that institution was controlled.

The purpose underlying the mothers' pension law was both humane and economical. To enable the mother to keep her children with her while they are young saves many a heartache for both mother and children. To provide, by the allowance of a modest sum payable out of the public revenue, for the support of mother and children will not, in the long run, cost the public any more money than it would to break up the home and send the children to the orphan's home and the mother to the almshouse.

In after years when the children are men and women grown they are not handicapped by the fact that they were, in their childhood, the inmates of a public institution. When they are able, in after years, to care for their mother they need never be tortured by the memory that at one time she was compelled to live in the poor house.

The spirit of home and independence is kept alive and encouraged and all the thousand and one little attentions which only a mother can bestow upon her own offsprings are saved to the growing boys and girls. Society, under the mothers' pension law, has the added assurance, and it is of immense value, that every good impulse of the children will be guarded and encouraged by the mother's patience and care.

The fact that in the first months of the law's operation many worthy applicants have been compelled to go without assistance and that courts have asked that larger sums be provided from the public funds to meet the claims of worthy mothers, indicates that the need for the enactment of such a law was greater even than its advocates contended.

Now that we have the law and its operation has brought to light the imperative need for its enactment, every effort should be exerted to make it effective so that society as well as mothers and children will reap the benefits the law was intended to bestow.

More Publicity Needed In the Management of Large Business Corporations

By President WOODROW WILSON

THERE are therefore, I suppose, certain rules of the game. First of all is the rule of publicity, not doing anything under cover, letting the public know what you are doing and judge of it according as it is. THERE ARE A GREAT MANY BUSINESSES IN THIS COUNTRY THAT HAVE FALLEN UNDER SUSPICION BECAUSE THEY WERE SO SECRETIVE WHEN THERE WAS NOTHING TO SECRETE THAT WAS DISHONORABLE. Publicity, which is required in sport, is required in business. Let's see how you are running the game!

Then, in the second place, there is a full equivalent for the money you receive, the full equivalent in service, not trying to skimp in the service in order to increase profits above a reasonable return, but trying to make the profits proportioned to the satisfaction of the people that you serve. There isn't any more solid foundation for business than that.

Then, in the third place, this game requires something more than ordinary sport. IT REQUIRES A CERTAIN KIND OF CONSCIENCE IN BUSINESS, A CERTAIN FEELING THAT WE ARE, AFTER ALL, IN THIS WORLD BECAUSE WE ARE EXPECTED TO MAKE GOOD ACCORDING TO THE STANDARDS OF THE PEOPLE WE LIVE WITH.

Political Organization an Essential Factor of Good Citizenship

By Dr. FRANK J. GOODNOW, President of Johns Hopkins University

THE great basis of American citizenship is now, as it has been since the birth of the republic, in the consciousness of nationality brought about by the competing influence of national political parties.

YOU SEE, THE GREAT POLITICAL PARTIES ARE TRAINING SCHOOLS OF CITIZENSHIP, AND UNTIL QUITE RECENTLY THERE HAS BEEN NO TRAINING IN CITIZENSHIP OUTSIDE OF ACTIVE PARTICIPATION IN POLITICS. OR, RATHER, THE ONLY EDUCATION FOR CITIZENSHIP HAS BEEN IN PARTY ORGANIZATIONS.

The west differs so much from the east, and really the east could gain so much by facing the problem in the way that the west faces it. The west has understood the great value of political organization and of political life as an essential factor of good citizenship.

In the east the educated classes are wont to look down upon politics, and men of wealth and education hold aloof from active participation in public affairs. In the west every college student has an ambition to get into politics, to get to congress and to do something of value for his country. THAT IS WHY THE POLITICAL REPRESENTATION OF THE WEST IS BOUND TO BE MORE PROGRESSIVE—I USE THE WORD IN ITS REAL SENSE AND NOT AS A PARTY LABEL—THAN THE REPRESENTATION OF THE EAST.

Poetry For Today

APRIL.

What is it in your eyes
That sets my heart a-beating;
A good-by or a greeting?
A look that lives and dies
Or slumbers in your eyes?

There's magic in your eyes
That brings us two together;
But Oh, I know not whether
The same shy soul twice lies
There just behind your eyes.

And April, how I fear
I'll never know you truly:
Though when I grow unruly
You charm me with a tear—
But April, how I fear!
—New York Evening Sun.

RUSSIA'S MIGHTY RIVER.

The Sluggish Volga Is Three Times as Long as the Rhine.

In Russia the rivers are large and sluggish, owing to their great length and slight fall. The Volga is the longest river in Europe. It is 2,300 miles in length—that is, three times as long as the Rhine—yet its total fall is only a little over 800 feet.

The great bogs in the Valdai hills, where it takes its rise, are only 750 feet above sea level, while Astrakhan, at the mouth, is sixty-five feet below the level of the sea.

The Russian fondly speaks and sings of it as "Matushka Volga," or "Little Mother Volga," in gratitude, no doubt, for the bounteous supply of fish, caviar and game, as well as comforts and pleasures afforded by this historic stream, which plays so important a part in the economic life of the nation. The products of Asia and Europe are carried on its waters; the two thousand odd river steamers are always busy, and the huge rafts, consisting often of thousands of logs, being floated or pulled down the stream, represent a small portion of the riches of Russia's inexhaustible forest lands.—New York Telegram.

Where Women Swim Best.

"The Korean women are the best swimmers in the world," said a life guard. "The Korean pearl diving is in their hands. They swim—they don't boat—they swim out to the pearl fisheries of Quelpart, lugging baskets with them. After this swim of half an hour they dive down fifty feet and fetch up queer one shelled pearl oysters as big as babies. They dive till their baskets are full—the baskets are corked to keep them afloat—and after three or four hours' work they swim back home with their catch. The big one shelled oysters are valuable as pearl mines and as food too. A half dozen Koreans will sit down to an oyster as gayly as you or I sit down to a broiled lobster."

Looked Bad For Papa.

William's uncle was a very tall, fine looking man, while his father was very small. William admired his uncle and wished to grow up like him. One day he said to his mother:

"Mama, how did uncle grow so big and tall?"

His mother said, "Well, when uncle was a small boy he was always a very good boy and tried to do what was right at all times, so God let him grow up big and tall."

William thought this over seriously for a few minutes, then said, "Mama, what kind of a boy was papa?"—Pittsburgh Post.

There's Room at the Top.

He entered the barber shop, sat himself down, resigned to his fate. The barber shaved him.

"Shampoo, sir?" asked the tensorialist.

"No," replied the man, gazing at his bald dome in the reflective mirror; "shine."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Views of Others

Editor Daily Herald:

Having read several notices in your paper of different dates, some of which had attached the signature of some of your "high up" officials, warning the children, under penalty to refrain from using the sidewalks for rollerskating purposes, and having recently visited many of the cities in the state, including Columbus, Cincinnati and smaller cities, where this privilege is not denied them, we have come to the conclusion that your city has more people in its confines that never enjoyed the pleasures incident to happy childhood, and who, as age has crept upon them, have developed into a set of hypochondriacs, Scrooges, and persons of like nature, than any other city within our knowledge.

If it were possible to "Osterize" these cranks, who are constitutional grumblers, and who have no pleasures in life, and who are not satisfied that others should have, and who cannot enjoy seeing the children getting all the pleasures that are possible and that are due them, it would be a God-send to the kids who want to grow into manhood and womanhood, flushed with health that always follows strenuous, vigorous youthful exercises.

We have failed to hear, as yet, of any great number of old people, middle aged people, or young people who have been run down and killed, or even injured by children enjoying this exercise. Perhaps, those who have charge of the Department of Vital Statistics have failed to enlighten the public as to the great number that his Honor, and others said would result if roller skating was allowed the children. Well, we cannot help but think that if your city could, by the above means, or something equally effective, rid your city of these grouches, it would result in the growth of a healthy class of children, and lessen the demand for a gymnasium for the masses.

As stated above, we feel sure that those who so strenuously oppose this method of childhood enjoyment, were raised in rural districts, or, are of a parentage that made their children old men and women, by drudgery, from infancy up.

Shame on such a set of old fossils. Your city will profit by their early demise. Push them over the divide as fast as possible, and have left a live wire city, filled with happy, frolicsome, shouting, roller skating kids, that will in after years be an example to a later generation of how their own healthful developments were due to vigorous out door roller skating exercise.

Let the kids vote next fall, and you'll have a set of officers that will see that the desires of the coming generation are shown some respect. Roller Skating? Sure.

The Mothers' Pension Law

That the law providing a pension for needy mothers was a necessity as well as a humanitarian piece of legislation is proven by the number of worthy applicants throughout the state who have made application to the courts to be granted the relief to which the law entitles them.

Hundreds of worthy mothers have been granted allowances by local courts which will enable them to keep their family together and provide the necessities of life, at least, for the little tots, who would so much miss the refining influence of home and mother if taken from home and confined in a public institution, no matter how well that institution was controlled.

The purpose underlying the mothers' pension law was both humane and economical. To enable the mother to keep her children with her while they are young saves many a heartache for both mother and children. To provide, by the allowance of a modest sum payable out of the public revenue, for the support of mother and children will not, in the long run, cost the public any more money than it would to break up the home and send the children to the orphans' home and the mother to the almshouse.

In after years when the children are men and women grown they are not handicapped by the fact that they were, in their childhood, the inmates of a public institution. When they are able, in after years, to care for their mother they need never be tortured by the memory that at one time she was compelled to live in the poor house.

The spirit of home and independence is kept alive and encouraged and all the thousand and one little attentions which only a mother can bestow upon her own offsprings are saved to the growing boys and girls. Society, under the mothers' pension law, has the added assurance, and it is of immense value, that every good impulse of the children will be guarded and encouraged by the mother's patience and care.

The fact that in the first months of the law's operation many worthy applicants have been compelled to go without assistance and that courts have asked that larger sums be provided from the public funds to meet the claims of worthy mothers, indicates that the need for the enactment of such a law was greater even than its advocates contended.

Now that we have the law and its operation has brought to light the imperative need for its enactment, every effort should be exerted to make it effective so that society as well as mothers and children will reap the benefits the law was intended to bestow.

More Publicity Needed In the Management of Large Business Corporations

By President WOODROW WILSON

THERE are therefore, I suppose, certain rules of the game. First of all is the rule of publicity, not doing anything under cover, letting the public know what you are doing and judge of it according as it is. THERE ARE A GREAT MANY BUSINESSES IN THIS COUNTRY THAT HAVE FALLEN UNDER SUSPICION BECAUSE THEY WERE SO SECRETIVE WHEN THERE WAS NOTHING TO SECRETE THAT WAS DISHONORABLE. Publicity, which is required in sport, is required in business. Let's see how you are running the game!

Then, in the second place, there is a full equivalent for the money you receive, the full equivalent in service, not trying to skimp in the service in order to increase profits above a reasonable return, but trying to make the profits proportioned to the satisfaction of the people that you serve. There isn't any more solid foundation for business than that.

Then, in the third place, this game requires something more than ordinary sport.

IT REQUIRES A CERTAIN KIND OF CONSCIENCE IN BUSINESS, A CERTAIN FEELING THAT WE ARE, AFTER ALL, IN THIS WORLD BECAUSE WE ARE EXPECTED TO MAKE GOOD ACCORDING TO THE STANDARDS OF THE PEOPLE WE LIVE WITH.

Political Organization an Essential Factor of Good Citizenship

By Dr. FRANK J. GOODNOW, President of Johns Hopkins University

THE great basis of American citizenship is now, as it has been since the birth of the republic, in the consciousness of nationality brought about by the competing influence of national political parties.

YOU SEE, THE GREAT POLITICAL PARTIES ARE TRAINING SCHOOLS OF CITIZENSHIP, AND UNTIL QUITE RECENTLY THERE HAS BEEN NO TRAINING IN CITIZENSHIP OUTSIDE OF ACTIVE PARTICIPATION IN POLITICS, OR, RATHER, THE ONLY EDUCATION FOR CITIZENSHIP HAS BEEN IN PARTY ORGANIZATIONS.

The west differs so much from the east, and really the east could gain so much by facing the problem in the way that the west faces it. The west has understood the great value of political organization and of political life as an essential factor of good citizenship.

In the east the educated classes are wont to look down upon politics, and men of wealth and education hold aloof from active participation in public affairs. In the west every college student has an ambition to get into politics, to get to congress and to do something of value for his country. THAT IS WHY THE POLITICAL REPRESENTATION OF THE WEST IS BOUND TO BE MORE PROGRESSIVE—I USE THE WORD IN ITS REAL SENSE AND NOT AS A PARTY LABEL—THAN THE REPRESENTATION OF THE EAST.

Poetry For Today

APRIL.

What is it in your eyes
That sets my heart a-beating;
A good-by or a greeting?
A look that lives and dies
Or slumbers in your eyes?

There's magic in your eyes
That brings us two together;
But Oh, I know not whether
The same shy soul twice lies
There just behind your eyes.

And April, how I fear
I'll never know you truly;
Though when I grow unruly
You charm me with a tear—
But April, how I fear!

RUSSIA'S MIGHTY RIVER.

The Sluggish Volga Is Three Times as Long as the Rhine.

In Russia the rivers are large and sluggish, owing to their great length and slight fall. The Volga is the longest river in Europe. It is 2,300 miles in length—that is, three times as long as the Rhine—yet its total fall is only a little over 800 feet.

The great bogs in the Valdai hills, where it takes its rise, are only 750 feet above sea level, while Astrakhan, at the mouth, is sixty-five feet below the level of the sea.

The Russian fondly speaks and sings of it as "Matushka Volga," or "Little Mother Volga," in gratitude, no doubt, for the bounteous supply of fish, caviar and game, as well as comforts and pleasures afforded by this historic stream, which plays so important a part in the economic life of the nation. The products of Asia and Europe are carried on its waters; the two thousand odd river steamers are always busy, and the huge rafts, consisting of ten of thousands of logs, being floated or pulled down the stream, represent a small portion of the riches of Russia's inexhaustible forest lands.—New York Telegram.

Where Women Swim Best.

"The Korean women are the best swimmers in the world," said a life guard. "The Korean pearl diving is in their hands. They swim—they don't boat—they swim out to the pearl fisheries of Quelpart, lugging baskets with them. After this swim of half an hour they dive down fifty feet and fetch up queer one shelled pearl oysters as big as babies. They dive till their baskets are full—the baskets are corked to keep them afloat—and after three or four hours' work they swim back home with their catch. The big one shelled oysters are valuable as pearls and as food too. A half dozen Koreans will sit down to an oyster as gayly as you or I sit down to a broiled lobster."

Looked Bad For Papa.

William's uncle was a very tall, fine looking man, while his father was very small. William admired his uncle and wished to grow up like him. One day he said to his mother:

"Mama, how did uncle grow so big and tall?"

His mother said, "Well, when uncle was a small boy he was always a very good boy and tried to do what was right at all times, so God let him grow up big and tall."

William thought this over seriously for a few minutes, then said, "Mama, what kind of a boy was papa?"—Pittsburgh Post.

Views of Others

Editor Daily Herald:

Having read several notices in your paper of different dates, some of which had attached the signature of some of your "high up" officials, warning the children, under penalty to refrain from using the sidewalks for rollerskating purposes, and having recently visited many of the cities in the state, including Columbus, Cincinnati and smaller cities, where this privilege is not denied them, we have come to the conclusion that your city has more people in its confines that never enjoyed the pleasures incident to happy childhood, and who, as age has crept upon them, have developed into a set of hypochondriacs, Scrooges, and persons of like nature, than any other city within our knowledge.

If it were possible to "Osterize" these cranks, who are constitutional grumblers, and who have no pleasures in life, and who are not satisfied that others should have, and who cannot enjoy seeing the children getting all the pleasures that are possible and that are due them, it would be a God-send to the kids who want to grow into manhood and womanhood, flushed with health that always follows strenuous, vigorous youthful exercises.

We have failed to hear, as yet, of any great number of old people, middle aged people, or young people who have been run down and killed, or even injured by children enjoying this exercise. Perhaps, those who have charge of the Department of Vital Statistics have failed to enlighten the public as to the great number that his Honor, and others said would result if roller skating was allowed the children. Well, we cannot help but think that if your city could, by the above means, or something equally effective, rid your city of these grouches, it would result in the growth of a healthy class of children, and lessen the demand for a gymnasium for the masses.

As stated above, we feel sure that those who so strenuously oppose this method of childhood enjoyment, were raised in rural districts, or, are of a parentage that made their children old men and women, by drudgery, from infancy up.

Shame on such a set of old fossils. Your city will profit by their early demise. ## C. H. & D. ROADMASTER IS INSTANTLY KILLED

Cut of Cars Crushes Geo. A. Rugman and Probably Fatally Injures Conductor Fred Buck—Tragedy Occurs in Local Railroad Yards Late This Afternoon.

George A. Rugman, of Chillicothe, roadmaster of the Wellston division of the C. H. & D., was almost instantly killed and Fred Buck, freight conductor, of Dayton, may die as a result of injuries sustained, when crushed beneath the trucks of a car in the C. H. & D. yards between Fayette street and North street, about 3 o'clock Monday afternoon. Rugman's body was removed to the Klever morgue and Buck was rushed to the Fayette Hospital.

The men had been inspecting a defect on one of a cut of cars on a siding, and were working under the car when an engine with another cut of cars backed into the one under which the men were working. Buck was caught and thrown to the side of the track. Rugman was ground beneath the truck axle and the road-bed.

Buck's injuries are believed to be mainly internal and it is thought several ribs were fractured. It is not expected that he will recover.

PRISONERS ESCAPE FROM LONDON JAIL

Two prisoners, W. A. Sheriff Chas. Weimer, a former

Fayette county man, soon discovered the jail delivery and instituted a search, but up to last reports had failed to locate his escaped prisoners.

It is believed that the two men stole a horse and buggy near LaFayette, and used the outfit in their getaway.

Allen, one of the escaped prisoners, is a former resident of Jefferson township, this county.

EASTER SERVICES OF RARE BEAUTY IN CITY CHURCHES

Easter morning dawned with a wonderful golden radiance that dissipated the gray cold skies of weeks and bravely heralded the coming of spring.

Inspired by the beauty of the Easter morning hundreds of worshippers assembled in the various churches of the city and "The Risen King" was glorified in triumphant music and eloquent speech.

It was a perfect Easter and throughout the entire day there was sung and celebrated the great symbol of the resurrection. At each church there was a wealth of Easter bloom with Ascension lilies given prominence and the white and gold of the Easter season standing out against backgrounds of green.

Presbyterian Church. Both morning and evening at the Presbyterian church the resurrection day was exemplified in services of appropriate beauty.

In the morning Garfield Commandery No. 28, Knights Templar, were guests of honor, the Sir Knights in uniform, and plumed helmets, although without the clanking sword, an imposing body as they marched in to be seated in the center of the auditorium.

An impressive Easter ritual interspersed by music, especially honored the guests and in it were introduced hymns and features of special significance to the Sir Knights.

The solo work in special Easter music was taken by Mrs. Shoop, Mrs. Burgett, Miss Hollingsworth, Messrs. Kibbler and Sprenger, and Mrs. Davis at the organ.

The Easter theme of the larger and fuller life as it comes through death and the resurrection was treated with eloquence and originality by the pastor, Rev. Wm. Boynton Gage.

The evening's Easter Cantata opened with a brilliant orchestral prelude at the close of which the white robed choir made effective entrance in the Processional. Miss Mazie Kessler played a lovely violin solo as offertory.

The cantata of "The Risen King" tuneful and varied, the triumphant Alleluiah no less symbolical than the plaintive strains of morning for the Lord taken away.

The program was one of the best song services ever given. A large choir showed the fine training of the director, Mrs. Wert Shoop, in effective rendering of the choruses and parts.

The men's work was especially heavy and the chorus of men one of the features of the program.

Miss Jessie Leavell, of Bloomingburg, took the opening solo, "Alleluia," splendidly, her high soprano full and clear. Mrs. Shoop interpreted "They Have Taken Away My Lord," with rare sympathy and sweetness and Mrs. Burgett gave effective rendition to the Recitative "When She Had Thus Said."

The trio, "With Loving Hearts," sung by Misses Woodward, Kellough and Rogers, was beautiful and Mrs. Davis' organ work ably met the demands of the ambitious music.

A very interesting Easter program was put on by the Sunday school, in charge of Assistant Superintendent Dr. Carey Persinger.

The attendance was very large. Exercises, songs, and speeches were prettily given by children of various classes and at the close the "Cradle Department" gave an informal baby show.

The Men's Bible Class came up from the basement to sing the class song and join in the last part of the program.

The Easter committee was made up of Misses Edna Hamm, Lelia Harvout, Grace McHenry, Mazie Kessler, Carrie Craig, and Mrs. Harry Sprenger.

Grace M. E. Church. Throughout the day at Grace Church the Easter spirit was prevalent in notable services and attended by immense audiences. In the morning Rev. Ross presented in an entirely new version of "The Immortal Hope," in an eloquent sermon, modernizing the Easter lesson.

The choir supplemented the sermon with Easter anthems and Miss Kessler and Mr. Kneisley played a violin duet, "Spring's Awakening."

The service of song in the evening offered a full program pulsing with joyous Easter anthems. Miss Gardner, the efficient directress, had a splendid choir of thirty voices, the support of the bass and tenor unusually strong and contributing largely to the good balance of the ensemble work. The attack and finish also was good.

Anthem solos were taken by Miss Gardner, Miss Ruth Parrett, who had a very difficult one for a young voice, and Mr. Frank M. Bateman, of Middletown.

The number of difficult anthems sung made strenuous demands upon leader, choir and organist, Miss Light.

The duet, "My Redeemer Liveth," Mendelssohn, given with artistic interpretation by Miss Gardner and Miss Sheen, was a very beautiful number and Mr. James Kneisley excelled in his perfect violin solo, "Legende," Wieniaski, and Miss Light was at her best.

First Baptist Church. Pleasing exercises by the children of the Sunday school ushered in the Easter services of the First Baptist church. There was a Sunday school attendance of 240 and the remarkable Easter offering of $50.

At the morning service Rev. A. W. West delivered a fine Easter sermon, his theme, "The Great Expectation," and the choir sung joyous Easter anthems.

The evening song service was greatly enjoyed by a large audience. Under the direction of Mr. E. H. Burch the choir sang in excellent harmony and with good expression. Taking the solo parts in the beautiful anthems were Miss Ella Hess, Mr. and Mrs. Burch, Mrs. Mindonna Dabe, Mr. J. H. Hicks, Herbert Davenport. Miss Mable Briggs, the organist, also rendered pleasing solo numbers.

Rev. West spoke on Baptism, and administered the ordinance at the close.

Church of Christ. The Church of Christ enjoyed special Easter services all day. There were over 300 at Sunday school, with a program for the benevolent work and an offering of $18.

Rev. Hostetter had an excellent morning sermon on "Eternal Life a Present Possession," the choir rendering Easter music.

The consensus of opinion was that a more pleasing Easter song service than the one of Sunday night, under the direction of Mr. Clifford Irvin, had never been given in the church.

The choruses were exceedingly good and the solo work beautiful. Mrs. Orlan Toops, Mrs. Hamer McDole, Mr. Chas. Snider, Miss Florence Michael, were the soloists and Misses Michael and Williams sang a duet in one anthem. Mrs. Orlan Toops and Miss Mable Jones added a pretty duet to the program.

Mrs. W. E. Robinson introduced the service with a piano prelude and played the accompaniments.

Mr. Z. E. Irvin gave the Easter address.

Episcopalian.

A beautiful service in keeping with the day was conducted by the rector, Rev. Eugene Prosser, at St. Andrews Mission Sunday morning. The rector impressed the Easter lesson in an impressive way and communion was administered.

Miss Jessie Leavell sang sweetly the solo in the Easter anthem.

A children's pretty Easter service in the afternoon was preceded by baptism. At its close Easter eggs and cards were distributed to the children.

East End Chapel.

A very attractive Easter program was put on by the Primary and Intermediate departments of the East End Chapel, Sunday evening.

Easter music was sung by the entire Sunday school. Mrs. W. A. Sanders and Mrs. C. F. Bonham had the service in charge.

C. H. & D. ROADMASTER IS INSTANTLY KILLED

Cut of Cars Crushes Geo. A. Rugman and Probably Fatally Injures Conductor Fred Buck—Tragedy Occurs in Local Railroad Yards Late This Afternoon.

George A. Rugman, of Chillicothe, roadmaster of the Wellston division of the C. H. & D., was almost instantly killed and Fred Buck, freight conductor, of Dayton, may die as a result of injuries sustained, when crushed beneath the trucks of a car in the C. H. & D. yards between Fayette street and North street, about 3 o'clock Monday afternoon. Rugman's body was removed to the Klever morgue and Buck was rushed to the Fayette Hospital.

The men had been inspecting a defect on one of a cut of cars on a siding, and were working under the car when an engine with another cut of cars backed into the one under which the men were working. Buck was caught and thrown to the side of the track. Rugman was ground beneath the truck axle and the roadbed.

Buck's injuries are believed to be mainly internal and it is thought several ribs were fractured. It is not expected that he will recover.

PRISONERS ESCAPE FROM LONDON JAIL

Two prisoners, W. A. Shaffer, who is charged with horse stealing, and Raymond Allen, a young man of the South Solon neighborhood, charged with non-support, escaped from the London jail, Saturday night, by picking a lock to the tunnel leading to the sheriff's office in the court house, and then walked away unobserved.

Sheriff Chas. Weiner, a former

Fayette county man, soon discovered the jail delivery and instituted a search, but up to last reports had failed to locate his escaped prisoners.

It is believed that the two men stole a horse and buggy near LaFayette, and used the outfit in their getaway.

Allen, one of the escaped prisoners, is a former resident of Jefferson township, this county.

EASTER SERVICES OF RARE BEAUTY IN CITY CHURCHES

Easter morning dawned with a wonderful golden radiance that dissipated the gray cold skies of weeks and bravely heralded the coming of spring.

Inspired by the beauty of the Easter morning hundreds of worshippers assembled in the various churches of the city and "The Risen King" was glorified in triumphant music and eloquent speech.

It was a perfect Easter and throughout the entire day there was sung and celebrated the great symbol of the resurrection. At each church there was a wealth of Easter bloom with Ascension lilies given prominence and the white and gold of the Easter season standing out against backgrounds of green.

Presbyterian Church.

Both morning and evening at the Presbyterian church the resurrection day was exemplified in services of appropriate beauty.

In the morning Garfield Commandery No. 28, Knights Templar, were guests of honor, the Sir Knights in uniform, and plumed helmets, although without the clanking sword, an imposing body as they marched in to be seated in the center of the auditorium.

An impressive Easter ritual interspersed by music, especially honored the guests and in it were introduced hymns and features of special significance to the Sir Knights.

The solo work in special Easter music was taken by Mrs. Shoop, Mrs. Burgett, Miss Hollingsworth, Messrs. Kibbler and Sprenger, and Mrs. Davis at the organ.

The Easter theme of the larger and fuller life as it comes through death and the resurrection was treated with eloquence and originality by the pastor, Rev. Wm. Boynton Gage.

The evening's Easter Cantata opened with a brilliant orchestral prelude at the close of which the white robed choir made effective entrance in the Processional. Miss Mazie Kessler played a lovely violin solo as offertory.

The cantata of "The Risen King" tuneful and varied, the triumphant Alleluiah no less symbolical than the plaintive strains of morning for the Lord taken away.

The program was one of the best song services ever given. A large choir showed the fine training of the director, Mrs. Wert Shoop, in effective rendering of the choruses and parts.

The men's work was especially heavy and the chorus of men one of the features of the program.

Miss Jessie Leavell, of Bloomingburg, took the opening solo, "Alleluia," splendidly, her high soprano full and clear. Mrs. Shoop interpreted "They Have Taken Away My Lord," with rare sympathy and sweetness and Mrs. Burgett gave effective rendition to the Recitative "When She Had Thus Said."

The trio, "With Loving Hearts," sung by Misses Woodward, Kellough and Rogers, was beautiful and Mrs. Davis' organ work ably met the demands of the ambitious music.

A very interesting Easter program was put on by the Sunday school, in charge of Assistant Superintendent Dr. Carey Persinger.

The attendance was very large. Exercises, songs, and speeches were prettily given by children of various classes and at the close the "Cradle Department" gave an informal baby show.

The Men's Bible Class came up from the basement to sing the class song and join in the last part of the program.

The Easter committee was made up of Misses Edna Hamm, Lella Harvout, Grace McHenry, Mazie Kessler, Carrie Craig, and Mrs. Harry Sprenger.

Grace M. E. Church.

Throughout the day at Grace church the Easter spirit was prevalent in notable services and attended by immense audiences.

In the morning Rev. Ross presented in an entirely new version of "The Immortal Hope," in an eloquent sermon, modernizing the Easter lesson.

The choir supplemented the sermon with Easter anthems and Miss Kessler and Mr. Kneisley played a violin duet, "Spring's Awakening."

The service of song in the evening offered a full program pulsing with joyous Easter anthems. Miss Gardner, the efficient directress, had a splendid choir of thirty voices, the support of the bass and tenor unusually strong and contributing largely to the good balance of the ensemble work. The attack and finish also was good.

Anthem solos were taken by Miss Gardner, Miss Ruth Parrett, who had a very difficult one for a young voice, and Mr. Frank M. Bateman, of Midletown.

The number of difficult anthems sung made strenuous demands upon leader, choir and organist, Miss Light.

The duet, "My Redeemer Liveth," Mendelssohn, given with artistic interpretation by Miss Gardner and Miss Sheen, was a very beautiful number and Mr. James Kneisley excelled in his perfect violin solo, "Legende," Wieniaski, and Miss Light was at her best.

First Baptist Church.

Pleasing exercises by the children of the Sunday school ushered in the Easter services of the First Baptist church. There was a Sunday school attendance of 240 and the remarkable Easter offering of $50.

At the morning service Rev. A. W. West delivered a fine Easter sermon, his theme, "The Great Expectation," and the choir sang joyous Easter anthems.

The evening song service was greatly enjoyed by a large audience. Under the direction of Mr. E. H. Burch the choir sang in excellent harmony and with good expression. Taking the solo parts in the beautiful anthems were Miss Ella Hess, Mr. and Mrs. Burch, Mrs. Mindonna Dabe, Mr. J. H. Hicks, Herbert Davenport. Miss Mable Briggs, the organist, also rendered pleasing solo numbers.

Rev. West spoke on Baptism, and administered the ordinance at the close.

Church of Christ.

The Church of Christ enjoyed special Easter services all day. There were over 300 at Sunday school, with a program for the benevolent work and an offering of $18.

Rev. Hostetler had an excellent morning sermon on "Eternal Life a Present Possession," the choir rendering Easter music.

The consensus of opinion was that a more pleasing Easter song service than the one of Sunday night, under the direction of Mr. Clifford Irvin, had never been given in the church.

The choruses were exceedingly good and the solo work beautiful. Mrs. Orlean Toops, Mrs. Hamer McDole, Mr. Chas. Snider, Miss Florence Michael, were the soloists and Misses Michael and Williams sang a duet in one anthem. Mrs. Orlean Toops and Miss Mable Jones added a pretty duet to the program.

Mrs. W. E. Robinson introduced the service with a piano prelude and played the accompaniments.

Mr. Z. E. Irvin gave the Easter address.

Episcopalian.

A beautiful service in keeping with the day was conducted by the rector, Rev. Eugene Prosser, at St. Andrews Mission Sunday morning. The rector impressed the Easter lesson in an impressive way and communion was administered.

Miss Jessie Leavell sang sweetly the solo in the Easter anthem.

A children's pretty Easter service in the afternoon was preceded by baptism. At its close Easter eggs and cards were distributed to the children.

East End Chapel.

A very attractive Easter program was put on by the Primary and Intermediate departments of the East End Chapel, Sunday evening.

Easter music was sung by the entire Sunday school. Mrs. W. A. Sanders and Mrs. C. F. Bonham had the service in charge.

1764 ATTEND SUNDAY SCHOOL EASTER MORNING

The total attendance at Sunday school in the four up-town protestant churches, Easter morning, was 1764—probably the largest number ever attending Sunday school in the city at one time.

Two of the churches—the Baptist and Grace M. E., established new records of attendance, with 822 at Grace church and 240 at the Baptist church. The attendance at the Presbyterian church was 400 and at the Church of Christ, 302, and at each of the four places special Easter services were carried out in the Sunday schools.

The number of men attending the various Sunday schools was in excess of 450. At Grace church the largest number ever attending Bible class at the church was present, the number reaching nine more than the goal set or 259. At the Presbyterian church 92 men were present; 55 at the Church of Christ and 45 at the Baptist church.

Lessons of absorbing interest were conducted in each class.

ELEVENTH EPISODE.

In the Clutch of the River Thieves.

CHAPTER I.

HERE was a wild clanging of bells on the yacht Hilarity as the sun pushed its scarlet rim up into the edge of dawn. At the foot of the landing stairs beautiful June Warner, her big, lustrous eyes widened in terror, had cast off the swift little motor tender, and the dark, handsome face of the black Vandyked man, peering over the deck rail, was distorted with rage. He shouted again his impatient commands to the officer on the quarterdeck.

Sleepy sailors were on deck now fumbling with the davits on each side. From one swung a little covered cutter and from the other a long, narrow racer. Blythe sprang to assist the sailors lowering the racer.

On the dock as the sun pushed its scarlet rim up into the edge of the dawn stood the well known and justly famous private detective Bill Wolf, his short, thick body stiff with the chill of the long night, and by him stood an overcoat and cap. Bill Wolf's round face and the visor of the cap were turned toward the river, where in mid-stream streaked the speedy little motorboat Flash, which had been stolen from that dock while the overcoat and cap peacefully slumbered. In the boat at the wheel sat a natty little figure with a chauffeur's cap and a tiny mustache. Upon his face was a benighted smile, and his eyes sparkled and snapped with the exhilaration of this divine moment. Behind him sat, stiff as a ramrod, a woman with high cheek bones and an expression of grimly patient determination on her lips.

"Voila, Mlle. Marie!" cried the little chauffeur as he cut a long, graceful curve between two slow moving barges. "Did I not say we would sail?" Marie's stiff lips worked for a moment, so that she could enunciate. "Voila!" she hoarsely uttered. "Voila, Henri!"

For only a moment the well known and justly famous private detective Bill Wolf looked after the swiftly swishing Henri; then he turned and pounded up the dock, racing for the nearest telephone. First of all he called the Eagle Eye Detective agency and secured a report from its wireless department; then he roused out of slumber a sharp faced, long nosed woman with high arched brows, who caught up her bedside telephone with instant alertness in her beady eyes.

"Well, I got him!" came the hoarse voice of Bill Wolf. "He's on board the yacht Hilarity, and, say, with the girl!" Immediately Honoria moved very swiftly.

The sleepy eyed steward stepped out upon the deck of the Hilarity with his uniformed jacket buttoned askew. "Beg your pardon, sir," he said. "Don't lower the boats for a moment." "What?" shouted Gilbert Blye. "The gasoline sir. It did not arrive until an hour ago."

"And there's no gasoline in these tanks?" roared big T. F. Edwards, pushing forward. "No, sir."

"You infernal idiot!" yelled Orin Cunningham. "I over those boats!" shouted Gilbert Blye. "Wilkins, get downstairs. You can fill those boats in the water." And he looked out across the waves. The escaping beauty was rounding the point.

In the pretty apartments which Ned and June Warner had fitted up to be their nest Ned rose from the couch where he had fallen asleep with the miniature of June in his hand and recognized the rasping voice of Honoria.

"Well, we've located your darling!" And there was a shrill cackle. "She's on board the Hilarity with my husband. And the yacht is anchored outside the bay. Good morning."

Ned wasted no time. Bobbie Blethering had a staunch little boat, and Bobbie was routed out of bed immediately, yawning and wondering why the world could never be at peace. But he was ready, though it took his agitated wife, Iris, seven minutes to make him comprehend that the Hilarity was a boat. She had to suppress all her ebullient emotions to do it, but she relieved herself somewhat by telephoning June's mother and father at their beautiful home in Brynport.

As the sun pushed its scarlet rim up into the edge of the dawn and stared in pleased surprise at the beautiful girl who was speeding toward the marshy shore a low, gray skiff with a portable motor attached to its stern slipped in and out of the dimness among the black hulls at the river's edge. In the skiff were three rough looking men and a roughly dressed woman, who sat huddled in the bow. All four were silent, but their furtive eyes roved constantly over every vessel around which they crept. In the bottom of the boat were a huge bundle of celery and a loosely piled tarpaulin.

Suddenly the woman leaned forward and touched the nearest man on the knee. He was a big, rawboned man with a bronzed face and a deep scar on his chin. The woman pointed, and the man turned his evil eyes in that direction. Surrounded by black coal barges was a shining houseboat with brass rails, mahogany cabin and all the fittings and appointments which extravagance could devise.

The man at the stern, a lean, wiry fellow with a hooked nose and a lean jaw which ended in a big knob on each cheek, slowed down the engine until it was noiseless. They completely circled the two adjoining docks before they came back to the slip where coal barges lay; then the skiff glided in beneath the overhang of the barges, and the big man with the scar on his chin knocked on the hull. No noise from within. The man picked up a club and pounded. No stirring.

There was not a living creature in sight except these four early morning birds of prey.

"All right, Babe," growled the man with the scar on his chin.

The woman looked up at the houseboat as if she were estimating for herself its plan, arrangement and all the mysteries which it might contain. She slowly rose and cast aside her shawl. She had been beautiful once. She still bore traces of it, would have shown more traces had she not been unkempt and in frowsy clothing.

"It's a wonder Jake wouldn't take a chance on the break in once in awhile," she complained. "He's as light on his feet as I am."

"But I ain't so quick in the head," hastily complimented Jake.

"That'll do," growled the leader of the party. "Up with you, Babe."

The woman shrugged her shoulders and put her roughly shod foot into the big man's outstretched palm. He raised slowly and lifted the woman straight up so that she could draw herself on board.

She disappeared. The three men sat silent.

"All right, Ben," The woman's face peered over the rail. "Say, it's a nes-selode!"

The lean Jake stepped forward promptly and climbed up over the big man's back, perfectly contented now that he knew the silken lung houseboat to be empty. The third man with little patches of half formed beard on his face took the rudder; then the huge Ben jumped up, caught the deck rail and drew himself upward.

For the hundredth time Ned put his head out of the window. At last they were coming! He seized his coat and hat, hurried down to the street and jumped into the mechanic's seat of Bobbie Blethering's roadster before it had come to a full stop; then they turned and whirled away toward the docks. Honoria Blye in her electric coupe was headed for that destination, too, and on the yacht Hilarity Blye was superintending with impatient energy the loading of the gasoline tanks in the two small boats.

The thoughts of all these people were bent upon the poor little runaway bride, who was at that moment skirting the marshy shore and hunting a place, no matter how desolate, in which to hide.

There was an inlet among the marshes. She ventured into it a short distance, but it led to nowhere, and she hurried out again to the open water. A small boat rounded the point, and for a moment June's eyes distended. Involuntarily she crouched.

CHAPTER II.

THE three river thieves in the exquisitely furnished houseboat worked with deft rapidity. It was the woman's swift, intuitive part to discover hiding places; the lean Jake's to discriminate in values; Big Ben's, with nippers and hammer and screwdriver, to rip off brasswork, to open drawers, to rend and tear and splitter if need be. Within an incredibly short space of time they had the skiff piled high with the richest and the best which the houseboat had contained; then they spread the tarpaulin over their plunder and disposed their bunches of celery so that the green leaves protruded in a fringe from under the edge of the tarpaulin; then the heavily laden skiff, with its four passengers and its loot, wormed its way clumsily from amid the barges, looking like an innocent farmer boat.

The sun, now a golden ball in the eastern mist, looked down upon a harborage busy with the pursuers of the little runaway bride. Henri and Marie were swishing swiftly; Ned and Bobbie and Iris were leaving the dock in Bobbie's speedy little cruiser; Honoria Blye and the well known and justly famous private detective, Bill Wolf, were putting out into the river in the Eagle Eye Detective agency's steam yawl, its stovepipe stack rolling black smoke and clinders and hot sparks back over the already blackening passengers; Gilbert Blye and the heavily lidded Edwards were just leaving the Hilarity in the keen little racer; Cunningham had been slow and below decks when they put off, but he followed now in the cutter. The racer and the cutter speeded straight for the point around which June had disappeared. Tommy Thomas waved a scarf after them and shouted absurd instructions to them, but Mrs. Villard stood quietly by the rail, her eyes fixed somberly on that distant point.

"Well, Babe, you sliced me, all right."

Slowly June raised from her crouching position. The cling of the small boat which she had slighted seemed to be fainter rather than more distinct. It was fading into the distance when she looked, and from its red stern she knew that it was not one of the Hilarity's boats. Once more she breathed a sigh of relief, but even as she did so she heard a familiar sound—the siren whistle of the Hilarity's cutter! And it was near!

Frantically now she scanned the shore. There was another inlet just ahead of her, and in desperation she steered into it. It was a narrow but distinct channel, winding about amid a tangle of shrubbery and marsh grass and stunted trees, with here and there a larger tree rising from a mound of solid earth. There were high banks presently and then a tiny island, in the center of which was a decrepit hut. June was about to step ashore when she heard the low purring of a motor. The cutter! From the sudden shut-in-ness of the sound it had entered the inlet. In terror June jumped back into the boat. The hut seemed deserted. There was no smoke rising from the chimney and no one to protect her if she were found there alone. She was away in a flash, circling the island. From the other side she saw that the channel led away into the marshes, probably to another inlet, and she had started to dart down this lonely waterway when suddenly she spied a rope trailing out into the water from under some bushes matted with marsh weeds. The whirr of the motor was rapidly advancing. She could scarcely hope to escape unseen. Her wits sharpened by her peril, she steered with swift decision toward the overhanging bushes. They parted as her prow ran into them, and bending low, she found herself shot into entire concealment. The whirr of the approaching motor grew loud. Quick as a flash June reached for the telltale rope which had betrayed this hiding place and drew it under cover of the matted bushes.

Louder and louder grew the whirr. It was just upon her. With her heart beating so that her ears were full of the sound of it, June peered out through her leafy screen. Orin Cunningham! He circled the island in his swift little cutter, his keen eyes searching everywhere. He passed within ten feet of her. She held her breath lest he might hear it, and once as his eyes turned full in her direction and she thought he had certainly detected her hiding place she almost screamed.

He passed on, however, and, running his light little boat ashore, stepped out and went up to the hut, the only possible place of concealment on the island. June had a swift debate with herself. Should she leave her concealment and, running her motor at its quietest speed, slip away down that other channel while Cunningham was in the hut? That debate was settled in an instant, for up the other channel slipped the swift little speed boat carrying Edwards and Gilbert Blye!

Blye's dark, handsome face was with-out its usual suave smile, and it wore a look of concern as, making a quick landing, he hurried up to the hut, followed by the plodding Edwards.

It seemed ages before they came away, and they had apparently made a thorough search, for they even stooped down as they came outside to peer under the stilted foundation amid the rubbish which had accumulated there. When they had gone away June remained for a long time in her hiding place, but finally she stepped from her boat and crept from her concealment. Thirst, inspired by the fever of her excitement, had driven her forth in search of drinkable water.

There was a cask of water in the hut, brackish and stale, but it was water, and she drank of it from a rusty old tin cup which hung to it. She had just set down the cup when her quick ears detected a low, steady hum. She stepped to the door, ready to make a dash for her boat, but as she set her foot upon the threshold she saw the dark gray prow of a skiff protruding its point around the bend of the lower channel! She darted back out of sight and, looking through a crack in the board wall, saw in the skiff three rough looking men and a rough looking woman. The skiff rode low in the water, and from under its tarpaulin daunted a fringe of celery leaves.

June laughed in relief. It was good to see human beings who were not in pursuit of her, who would befriend and protect her, and she had almost run down to meet them when suddenly loud, angry voices came from the frail little craft. There was a bitter quarrel, in which the woman took a shrill part, and as the boat landed the woman jumped out and stooped swiftly. The man with the scraggly mustache and the scattered tufts of beard on his face jumped ashore, cursing. The woman raised up swiftly and, with a shriek like a cat, jumped for the man with a long knife glittering in her hand. The knife flashed down, and the man staggered back. The gleaming blade was raised again, but before it could descend the huge, rawboned man, who had jumped from the boat, caught the woman's arm.

June saw no more. She ran wildly around the little hut, looking vainly for some place of concealment. A rusty stove, a rickety table, some rule benches, two straw pallets—that was all. There was no other room, not even a cupboard. In the telling June's frantically roving eyes found a trapdoor, one of its boards loose. On the wooden wall beneath it was a series of cross sticks, and without hesitation June ran up this rude ladder, shoved the trapdoor aside and scrambled into the attic.

There were voices below. The quarrel, whatever it had been about, had evidently been settled, for the woman was laughing, and so was the big, rawboned man. June peered down through a crack in the ceiling boards. These two and the lean fellow with the hook nose were loaded with all they could carry. The big man with the scar on his chin dropped his heavy bags on the floor with a clatter, and the brass stopcock of a washbasin rolled out of one of them. The woman carried silks and fine linens in her bundles, and the lean little fellow was loaded with silverware. As they deposited their burdens on the floor the other man came in and sat heavily on a bench.

"You done it o' purpose."

"Well, Babe, you sliced me, all right," he grinned, and, throwing off his coat, he loosened his shirt at the neck and bared his left shoulder. There was an ugly wound near his armpit, and it was bleeding profusely.

June clapped her hand over her mouth to prevent a hysterical outcry, while her senses swam. She was seeing phases of life that she little dreamed existed.

The woman made a laughing reply and after the people exhibited different articles of jewelry, clothing, etc., they started cooking a meal.

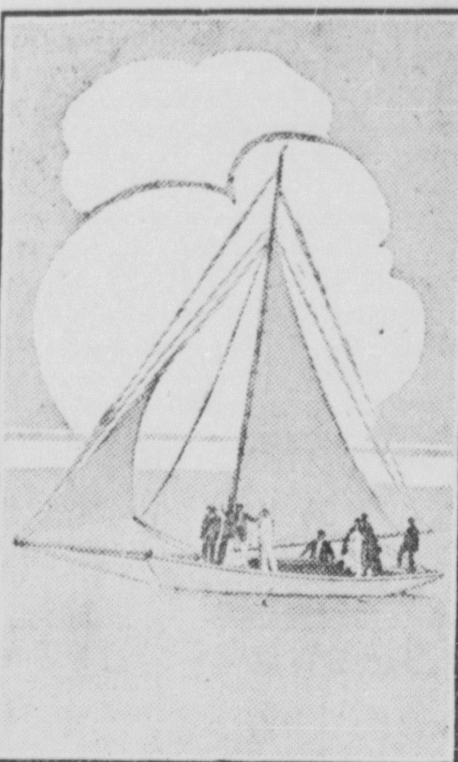

The men were at the table an incredibly short time. They gulped their food, and then, tired and sleepy, they lay down on straw pallets for a few minutes of honest rest, while the cold and starved little runaway bride in the attic looked down with ravenous eyes on what they had left. The odor of the hot coffee made her feel faint. Only the terror kept her on the alert.

The important thing to June in her predicament was to devise some mode of escape, but the opportunity to do so was terrifyingly remote.

CHAPTER III.

THE woman below was acting strangely as she cleared away the remains of the breakfast and washed the dishes. From time to time she passed near her husband, bending over slightly, and finally she stopped beside him and listened to his breathing, but she shook her head and went away. Big Ben was quite plainly fast asleep, sprawled in complete relaxation, while lean Jake was snoring with great energy. The woman stooped and touched her husband's shoulder. He moved slightly, and she went back to her dishes. The next time she came he did not even twitch at the touch, and with deft fingers she reached into his vest pocket and extracted a little chamois bag.

So that was how one woman solved her money problem, and her burning eyes told with what bitterness she had resorted to this bold step. Of more value than her husband, even in his low profession, she was still his supine inferior in the rights of possession.

Down the Channel Sped the Little Cutter.

What she had was a gift from him, and, as June had heard him put it himself, he gave her what was good for her.

The woman! She was coming up the ladder! The fugitive hidden in the attic was stunned by this unexpected action.

Nearer and nearer came the woman's head, and nearer and nearer to the edge of the trapdoor extended June's strong young hands!

"Babe?" Flub stirred uneasily.

The woman was down the ladder like a cat.

"What?"

No answer. The man was still sound asleep. The woman stood over him for awhile to make sure of this and started for the ladder again. Halfway across the room she hesitated, turned, walked swiftly to the end of the hut and hid the little chamois bag beneath a loose stone behind the stove.

She was putting away the last of the dishes when suddenly she stopped, turned, and a slow smile spread upon her lips. Her eyes burned with a somber fire. She went over to Big Ben and deftly secured a long, slender cigarette holder. She crossed swiftly to her husband and inserted the holder in his top vest pocket, so that its shining tip protruded. The water cask stood by Big Ben's head. With a gleam in her eye the woman went over, filled the rusty tin cup and deliberately poured a fourth of its contents over Big Ben's face.

"Excuse me," she laughed as he jumped up and with the same motion jerked a revolver from his pocket.

He grinned at her sheepishly as he saw the sparkle of mischief in her eye, and he wiped his face with his sleeve. "You done it o' purpose," he speculated, chuckling.

"Think so?" she dimpled.

Big Ben's eyes brightened.

"I believe you're after that shawl!"

"Flub'd sell it." And she glanced across at the sleeping man with vindictive hatred.

"Take it," urged Big Ben, "and if Flub sells it tell me." He picked up the shawl and clumsily threw it around the woman's shoulders. She looked down at the shawl and toyed with its long, delicate fringe. She took it off slowly and gave it back to the man.

"Nothing doing," she sadly decided; then she slowly turned and looked at her husband and walked away. There was a softening in Big Ben's eyes as she walked away, and then he, too, glanced at the sleeping Flub. He strolled to the door and came back. Suddenly he stopped. The gleam of something yellow had caught his gaze. He walked close and bent low. He pulled the cigarette holder out far enough to identify it and pushed it back; then he gave the sleeper a kick.

"Get up, you thief!" he roared.

Flub sprang up, dazed.

"What's that?"

"I said get up, you thief!" roared Big Ben as lean Jake abruptly stopped snoring and jumped up. He was halfway to the ladder before he realized that this was not a raid, and June, divining his intention, rose swiftly and put her hands on the loose clapboards of the roof. Ben jerked the cigarette holder from Flub's pocket. "You stole it!"

Flub seemed dazed by the accusation, but suddenly he let out a yell. Mechanically he had reached in his vest pocket, as was his habit when the chamois bag was there, and had discovered his loss.

"My diamond!" he yelled. "It's gone!" And his face turned white as he looked around the tense group. Slowly comprehension came to him. "You framed me!" he suddenly shouted, pointing a trembling finger at Big

Ben. "You copped my diamond; then you planted this cigarette holder so you could!"

"You're a liar!" bellowed Big Ben and sprang for his accuser.

A knife gleamed in Flub's hand, and he slashed savagely at his onrushing opponent. With a roar of rage Big Ben caught the descending wrist, wrested the weapon from it and plunged it to the hilt in Flub's breast.

There was a piercing shriek from the attic and a tearing of boards. The woman, quick of mind as she was of body, was the first to comprehend what that might mean. She sprang to the ladder, but as she went she cast a backward glance at the lifeless man on the floor. There was no shudder in her, only cold triumph.

"It's a girl! She's on the roof!" cried the woman as she gained the attic.

Lean Jake was the first out of the door, and Big Ben just after him. They rounded the corner of the hut just in time to see June jump from the roof and dart for her boat. It was the woman who caught her.

"Let me go!" implored June. "I won't tell!"

Those last three words would seal her fate in the mind of any murderous thief. Big Ben had caught her roughly by the arm, and now he looked inquiringly at the others.

"Drown her," advised Lean Jake, who was more full of fear than a thief should be. "She knows too much."

All three of them looked at the water. It spread far into the marshes, and it held its secrets well and long. Without a word Big Ben swung June up in his arms and started with her to the water's edge, while she uttered shriek upon shriek.

A shot and then another answered June's piercing shrieks, and down the channel from the inlet swiftly sped the little cutter, with Orin Cunningham at the wheel, revolver in hand.

"Hands up!" yelled a strong voice, and another shot startled the air of the marshes. Gilbert Blye! He stood up in his racer, and over the wheel bent heavy Edwards, his eyes narrowed and his thick lips firmly set.

Big Ben had dropped June at the first shot and had reached for his revolver. Lean Jake had dropped flat on the ground behind a boulder, but before Big Ben could return the fire of the oncoming boats from the Hilarity he was confused by a shot from another quarter, and through the reeds of the marsh there pushed a narrow steel gray motorboat, in which stood a tall man with a soft hat and a loosely knotted cravat.

A stranger! And he was nearer to the helpless June than her pursuers from the Hilarity! She ran toward him like a deer, and as his driver drew close inshore June sprang into the boat.

"Hurry!" she cried. "Please hurry!" The man, evidently an artist, from the canvases and folding easel in his boat, followed her terrified gaze as she glanced back, her terror divided between the murderers on the island and the men in the boats. The artist lowered June to a seat beside him, and, with a word to the driver, they darted away toward the channel. A shot whizzed over their heads as they started, and shot after shot resounded from the upper channel.

The man with the white mustache paid no attention to Big Ben as he steered his swift little cutter around the island and struck into the lower channel after the artist and the beautiful young girl who had escaped from the attic. Nor did the man with the Lean Jake raised up from behind his boulder as the boat shot by, and the three—Babe, Big Ben and Jake—looked at each other in bewilderment. Another boat came swishing down past the island. It was driven by a blazing eyed little chauffeur with a tiny mustache, and he was shouting at the top of his voice. Behind him sat stiffly a woman with high cheek bones and a wilderness of gums, and she, too, was shouting: "Voila! Voila! Voila!"

ELEVENTH EPISODE.

In the Clutch of the River Thieves.

CHAPTER I.

THERE was a wild clanging of bells on the yacht Hilarity as the sun pushed its scarlet rim up into the edge of dawn. At the foot of the landing stairs beautiful June Warner, her big, lustrous eyes widened in terror, had cast off the swift little motor tender, and the dark, handsome face of the black Vandyke man, peering over the deck rail, was distorted with rage. He shouted again his impatient commands to the officer on the quarterdeck.

Sleepy sailors were on deck now fumbling with the davits on each side. From one swung a little covered cutter and from the other a long, narrow racer. Blythe sprang to assist the sailors lowering the racer.

On the dock as the sun pushed its scarlet rim up into the edge of the dawn stood the well known and justly famous private detective Bill Wolf, his short, thick body stiff with the chill of the long night, and by him stood an overcoat and cap. Bill Wolf's round face and the visor of the cap were turned toward the river, where in mid-stream streaked the speedy little motorboat Flash, which had been stolen from that dock while the overcoat and cap peacefully slumbered. In the boat at the wheel sat a native little figure with a chauffeur's cap and a tiny mustache. Upon his face was a benignant smile, and his eyes sparkled and snapped with the exhilaration of this divine moment. Behind him sat, stiff as a ramrod, a woman with high cheek bones and an expression of grimly patient determination on her lips.

"Voila, Mlle. Marie!" cried the little chauffeur as he cut a long, graceful curve between two slow moving barges. "Did I not say we would sail?"

Marie's stiff lips worked for a moment, so that she could enunciate.

"Voila!" she hoarsely uttered. "Voila, Henri!"

For only a moment the well known and justly famous private detective Bill Wolf looked after the swiftly swishing Henri; then he turned and pounded up the dock, racing for the nearest telephone. First of all he called the Eagle Eye Detective agency and secured a report from its wireless department; then he roused out of slumber a sharp faced, long nosed woman with high arched brows, who caught up her bedside telephone with instant alertness in her beady eyes.

"Well, I got him!" came the hoarse voice of Bill Wolf. "He's on board the yacht Hilarity, and, say, with the girl!"

Immediately Honoria moved very swiftly.

The sleepy-eyed steward slept out upon the deck of the Hilarity with his uniformed jacket buttoned askew.

"Beg your pardon, sir," he said. "Don't lower the boats for a moment."

"What?" shouted Gilbert Rye.

"The gasoline sir. It did not arrive until an hour ago."

"And there's no gasoline in these tanks?" roared big T. F. Edwards, pushing forward.

"No, sir."

"You infernal idiot!" yelled Orin Cunningham.

"Lower those boats!" shouted Gilbert Rye. "Wilkins, get downstairs. You can fill those boats in the water." And he looked out across the waves. The escaping beauty was rounding the point.

In the pretty apartments which Ned and June Warner had fitted up to be their nest Ned rose from the couch where he had fallen asleep with the miniature of June in his hand and recognized the rasping voice of Honoria.

"Well, we've located your darling!" And there was a shrill cackle. "She's on board the Hilarity with my husband. And the yacht is anchored outside the bay. Good morning."

Ned wasted no time. Bobbie Blethering had a staunch little boat, and Bobbie was routed out of bed immediately, yawning and wondering why the world could never be at peace. But he was ready, though it took his agitated wife, Iris, seven minutes to make him comprehend that the Hilarity was a boat. She had to suppress all her ebullient emotions to do it, but she relieved herself somewhat by telephoning June's mother and father at their beautiful home in Brynport.

As the sun pushed its scarlet rim up into the edge of the dawn and stared in pleased surprise at the beautiful girl who was speeding toward the marshy shore a low, gray skiff with a portable motor attached to its stern skipped in and out of the dimness among the black hulls at the river's edge. In the skiff were three rough looking men and a roughly dressed woman, who sat huddled in the bow. All four were silent, but their furtive eyes roved constantly over every vessel around which they crept. In the bottom of the boat were a huge bundle of celery and a loosely piled tarpaulin.

Suddenly the woman leaned forward and touched the nearest man on the knee. He was a big, rawboned man with a bronzed face and a deep scar on his chin. The woman pointed, and the man turned his evil eyes in that direction. Surrounded by black coal barges was a shining houseboat with brass rails, mahogany cabin and all the fittings and appointments which extravagance could devise.

The man at the stern, a lean, wiry fellow with a hooked nose and a lean jaw which ended in a big knob on each cheek, slowed down the engine until it was noiseless. They completely circled the two adjoining docks before they came back to the slip where coal barges lay; then the skiff glided in beneath the overhang of the barges, and the big man with the scar on his chin knocked on the hull. No noise from within. The man picked up a club and pounded. No stirring.

There was not a living creature in sight except these four early morning birds of prey.

"All right, Babe," growled the man with the scar on his chin.

The woman looked up at the houseboat as if she were estimating for herself its plan, arrangement and all the mysteries which it might contain. She slowly rose and cast aside her shawl. She had been beautiful once. She still bore traces of it, would have shown more traces had she not been unkempt and in frowsy clothing.

"It's a wonder Jake wouldn't take a chance on the break-in once in awhile," she complained. "He's as light on his feet as I am."

"But I ain't so quick in the head," hastily complimented Jake.

"That'll do," growled the leader of the party. "Up with you, Babe."

The woman shrugged her shoulders and put her roughly shod foot into the big man's outstretched palm. He raised slowly and lifted the woman straight up so that she could draw herself on board.

She disappeared. The three men sat silent.

"All right, Ben." The woman's face peered over the rail. "Say, it's a nest-egg!"

The lean Jake stepped forward promptly and climbed up over the big man's back, perfectly contented now that he knew the silken hung houseboat to be empty. The third man with little patches of half formed beard on his face took the rudder; then the huge Ben jumped up, caught the deck rail and drew himself upward.

For the hundredth time Ned put his head out of the window. At last they were coming! He seized his coat and hat, hurried down to the street and jumped into the mechanic's seat of Bobbie Blethering's roadster before it had come to a full stop; then they turned and whirled away toward the docks. Honoria Rye in her electric coupe was headed for that destination, too, and on the yacht Gilbert Rye was superintending with impatient energy the loading of the gasoline tanks in the two small boats.

The thoughts of all these people were bent upon the poor little runaway bride, who was at that moment skirting the marshy shore and hunting a place, no matter how desolate, in which to hide.

There was an inlet among the marshes. She ventured into it a short distance, but it led to nowhere, and she hurried out again to the open water. A small boat rounded the point, and for a moment June's eyes distended. Involuntarily she crouched.

CHAPTER II.

THE three river thieves in the exquisitely furnished houseboat worked with deft rapidity. It was the woman's swift, intuitive part to discover hiding places; the lean Jake's to discriminate in values; Big Ben's, with nippers and hammer and screwdriver, to rip off brasswork, to open drawers, to rend and tear and splinter if need be. Within an incredibly short space of time they had the skiff piled high with the richest and the best which the houseboat had contained; then they spread the tarpaulin over their plunder and disposed their bunches of celery so that the green leaves protruded in a fringe from under the edge of the tarpaulin; then the heavily laden skiff, with its four passengers and its loot, wormed its way clumsily from amid the barges, looking like an innocent farmer boat.

The sun, now a golden ball in the eastern mist, looked down upon a harborage busy with the pursuers of the little runaway bride. Henri and Marie were swishing swiftly; Ned and Bobbie and Iris were leaving the dock in Bobbie's speedy little cruiser; Honoria Rye and the well known and justly famous private detective, Bill Wolf, were putting out into the river in the Eagle Eye Detective agency's steam yawl, its stovepipe stack rolling black smoke and clinders and hot sparks back over the already blackening passengers; Gilbert Rye and the heavily lidded Edwards were just leaving the Hilarity in the keen little racer; Cunningham had been slow and below decks when they put off, but he followed now in the cutter. The racer and the cutter speeded straight for the point around which June had disappeared. Tommy Thomas waved a scarf after them and shouted absurd instructions to them, but Mrs. Villard stood quietly by the rail, her eyes fixed somberly on that distant point.

"Well, Babe, you sliced me, all right."

Slowly June raised from her crouching position. The cling of the small boat which she had sighted seemed to be fainter rather than more distinct. It was fading into the distance when she looked, and from its red stern she knew that it was not one of the Hilarity's boats. Once more she breathed a sigh of relief, but even as she did so she heard a familiar sound—the siren whistle of the Hilarity's cutter! And it was near!

Frantically now she scanned the shore. There was another inlet just ahead of her, and in desperation she steered into it. It was a narrow but distinct channel, winding about amid a tangle of shrubbery and marsh grass and stunted trees, with here and there a larger tree rising from a mound of solid earth. There were high banks presently and then a tiny island, in the center of which was a decrepit hut. June was about to step ashore when she heard the low purring of a motor. The cutter! From the sudden shut-in-ness of the sound it had entered the inlet. In terror June jumped back into the boat. The hut seemed deserted. There was no smoke rising from the chimney and no one to protect her if she were found there alone. She was away in a flash, circling the island. From the other side she saw that the channel led away into the marshes, probably to another inlet, and she had started to dart down this lonely waterway when suddenly she spied a rope trailing out into the water from under some bushes matted with marsh weeds. The whirr of the motor was rapidly advancing. She could scarcely hope to escape unseen. Her wits sharpened by her peril, she steered with swift decision toward the overhanging bushes. They parted as her prow ran into them, and bending low, she found herself shot into entire concealment. The whirr of the approaching motor grew loud. Quick as a flash June reached for the teltate rope which had betrayed this hiding place and drew it under cover of the matted bushes.

Louder and louder grew the whirr. It was just upon her. With her heart beating so that her ears were full of the sound of it, June peered out through her leafy screen. Orin Cunningham! He circled the island in his swift little cutter, his keen eyes searching everywhere. He passed within ten feet of her. She held her breath lest he might hear it, and once as his eyes turned full in her direction and she thought he had certainly detected her hiding place she almost screamed.

He passed on, however, and, running his light little boat ashore, stepped out and went up to the hut, the only possible place of concealment on the island. June had a swift debate with herself. Should she leave her concealment and, running her motor at its quietest speed, slip away down that other channel while Cunningham was in the hut? That debate was settled in an instant, for up the other channel slipped the swift little speed boat carrying Edwards and Gilbert Rye!

Blye's dark, handsome face was without its usual suave smile, and it wore a look of concern as, making a quick landing, he hurried up to the hut, followed by the plodding Edwards.

It seemed ages before they came away, and they had apparently made a thorough search, for they even stooped down as they came outside to peer under the stilted foundation amid the rubbish which had accumulated there. When they had gone away June remained for a long time in her hiding place, but finally she stepped from her boat and crept from her concealment. Thirst, inspired by the fever of her excitement, had driven her forth in search of drinkable water.

There was a cask of water in the hut, brackish and stale, but it was water, and she drank of it from a rusty old tin cup which hung to it. She had just set down the cup when her quick ears detected a low, steady hum. She stepped to the door, ready to make a dash for her boat, but as she set her foot upon the threshold she saw the dark gray prow of a skiff protruding its point around the bend of the lower channel! She darted back out of sight and, looking through a crack in the board wall, saw in the skiff three rough looking men and a rough looking woman. The skiff rode low in the water, and from under its tarpaulin flaunted a fringe of celery leaves.

June laughed in relief. It was good to see human beings who were not in pursuit of her, who would befriend and protect her, and she had almost run down to meet them when suddenly loud, angry voices came from the frail little craft. There was a bitter quarrel, in which the woman took a shrill part, and as the boat landed the woman jumped out and stooped swiftly. The man with the scraggly mustache and the scattered tufts of beard on his face jumped ashore, cursing. The woman raised up swiftly and, with a shriek like a cat, jumped for the man with a long knife glittering in her hand. The knife flashed down, and the man staggered back. The gleaming blade was raised again, but before it could descend the huge, rawboned man, who had jumped from the boat, caught the woman's arm.

June saw no more. She ran wildly around the little hut, looking vainly for some place of concealment. A rusty stove, a rickety table, some rule benches, two straw pallets—that was all. There was no other room, not even a cupboard. In the telling June's frantically roving eyes found a trapdoor, one of its boards loose. On the wooden wall beneath it was a series of cross sticks, and without hesitation June ran up this rude ladder, shoved the trapdoor aside and scrambled into the attic.

There were voices below. The quarrel, whatever it had been about, had evidently been settled, for the woman was laughing, and so was the big, rawboned man. June peered down through a crack in the ceiling boards. These two and the lean fellow with the hook nose were loaded with all they could carry. The big man with the scar on his chin dropped his heavy bags on the floor with a clatter, and the brass stopcock of a washbasin rolled out of one of them. The woman carried silks and fine linens in her bundles, and the lean little fellow was loaded with silverware. As they deposited their burdens on the floor the other man came in and sat heavily on a bench.

"Well, Babe, you sliced me, all right," he grinned, and, throwing off his coat, he loosened his shirt at the neck and bared his left shoulder. There was an ugly wound near his armpit, and it was bleeding profusely.

June clapped her hand over her mouth to prevent a hysterical outcry, while her senses swam. She was seeing phases of life that she little dreamed existed.

The woman made a laughing reply and after the people exhibited different articles of jewelry, clothing, etc., they started cooking a meal.

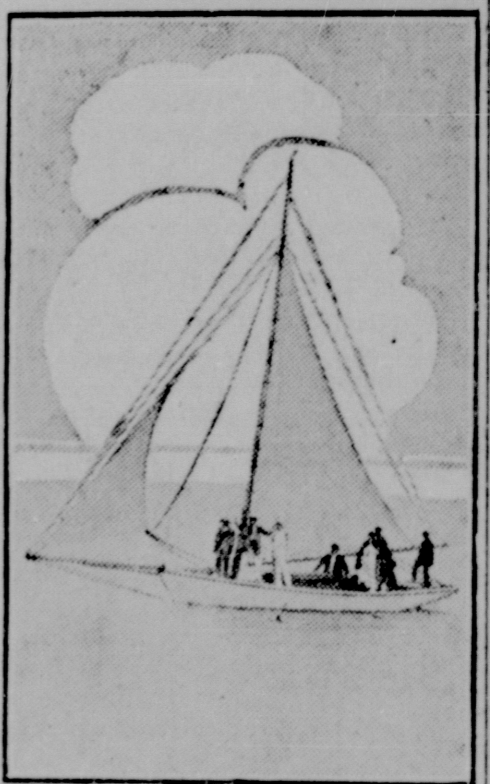

The men were at the table an incredibly short time. They gulped their food, and then, tired and sleepy, they lay down on straw pallets for a few minutes of honest rest, while the cold and starved little runaway bride in the attic looked down with ravenous eyes on what they had left. The odor of the hot coffee made her feel faint. Only terror kept her on the alert.

The important thing to June in her predicament was to devise some mode of escape, but the opportunity to do so was terrifyingly remote.

CHAPTER III.

THE woman below was acting strangely as she cleared away the remains of the breakfast and washed the dishes. From time to time she passed near her husband, bending over slightly, and finally she stopped beside him and listened to his breathing, but she shook her head and went away. Big Ben was quite plainly fast asleep, sprawled in complete relaxation, while lean Jake was snoring with great energy. The woman stooped and touched her husband's shoulder. He moved slightly, and she went back to her dishes. The next time she came he did not even twitch at the touch, and with deft fingers she reached into his vest pocket and extracted a little chamouis bag.

So that was how one woman solved her money problem, and her burning eyes told with what bitterness she had resorted to this bold step. Of more value than her husband, even in his low profession, she was still his supine inferior in the rights of possession.

Down the Channel Sped the Little Cutter.

What she had was a gift from him, and, as June had heard him put it himself, he gave her what was good for her.

The woman! She was coming up the ladder! The fugitive hidden in the attic was stunned by this unexpected action.

Nearer and nearer came the woman's head, and nearer and nearer to the edge of the trapdoor extended June's strong young hands!

"Babe?" Flub stirred uneasily.

The woman was down the ladder like a cat.

"What?"

No answer. The man was still sound asleep. The woman stood over him for awhile to make sure of this and started for the ladder again. Halfway across the room she hesitated, turned, walked swiftly to the end of the hut and hid the little chamouis bag beneath a loose stone behind the stove.

She was putting away the last of the dishes when suddenly she stopped, turned, and a slow smile spread upon her lips. Her eyes burned with a somber fire. She went over to Big Ben and deftly secured a long, slender cigarette holder. She crossed swiftly to her husband and inserted the holder in his top vest pocket, so that its shining tip protruded. The water cask stood by Big Ben's head. With a gleam in her eye the woman went over, filled the rusty tin cup and deliberately poured a fourth of its contents over Big Ben's face.

"Excuse me," she laughed as he jumped up and with the same motion jerked a revolver from his pocket.

He grinned at her sheepishly as he saw the sparkle of mischief in her eye, and he wiped his face with his sleeve.

"You done it o' purpose," he speculated, chuckling.

"Think so?" she smiled.

Big Ben's eyes brightened.

"I believe you're after that shawl!"

"Flub'd sell it." And she glanced across at the sleeping man with vindictive hatred.

"Take it," urged Big Ben, "and if Flub sells it tell me." He picked up the shawl and clumsily threw it around the woman's shoulders. She looked down at the shawl and toyed with its long, delicate fringe. She took it off slowly and gave it back to the man.

"Nothing doing," she sadly decided, then she slowly turned and looked at her husband and walked away. There was a softening in Big Ben's eyes as she walked away, and then he, too, glanced at the sleeping Flub. He stroiled to the door and came back. Suddenly he stopped. The gleam of something yellow had caught his gaze. He walked close and bent low. He pulled the cigarette holder out far enough to identify it and pushed it back; then he gave the sleeper a kick.

"Get up, you thief!" he roared.

Flub sprang up, dazed.

"What's that?"

"I said get up, you thief!" roared Big Ben as lean Jake abruptly stopped snoring and jumped up. He was halfway to the ladder before he realized that this was not a raid, and June, divining his intention, rose swiftly and put her hands on the loose clapboards of the roof. Ben jerked the cigarette holder from Flub's pocket. "You stole it!"

Flub seemed dazed by the accusation, but suddenly he let out a yell. Mechanically he had reached in his vest pocket, as was his habit when the chamouis bag was there, and had discovered his loss.

"My diamond!" he yelled. "It's gone!" And his face turned white as he looked around the tense group.

Slowly comprehension came to him. "You framed me!" he suddenly shouted, pointing a trembling finger at Big

Ben. "You copped my diamond; then you planted this cigarette holder on me!"

"You're a liar!" bellowed Big Ben and sprang for his accuser.

A knife gleamed in Flub's hand, and he slashed savagely at his onrushing opponent. With a roar of rage Big Ben caught the descending wrist, wrested the weapon from it and plunged it to the hilt in Flub's breast.

There was a piercing shriek from the attic and a tearing of boards. The woman, quick of mind as she was of body, was the first to comprehend what that might mean. She sprang to the ladder, but as she went she cast a backward glance at the lifeless man on the floor. There was no shudder in her, only cold triumph.

"It's a girl! She's on the roof!" cried the woman as she gained the attic.

Lean Jake was the first out of the door, and Big Ben just after him. They rounded the corner of the hut just in time to see June jump from the roof and dart for her boat. It was the woman who caught her.

"Let me go!" implored June. "I won't tell!"

Those last three words would seal her fate in the mind of any murderous thief. Big Ben had caught her roughly by the arm, and now he looked inquiringly at the others.

"Drown her," advised Lean Jake, who was more full of fear than a thief should be. "She knows too much."

All three of them looked at the water. It spread far into the marshes, and it held its secrets well and long. Without a word Big Ben swung June up in his arms and started with her to the water's edge, while she uttered shriek upon shriek.

DUTCH STEAMER IS MISSING

Believed to Have Foundered Off Cape Hatteras With All Hands—Last Wireless Message Reported Boat as Sinking Fast—Carried Crew of Forty Men and Four Passengers—Craft Destroyed Elsewhere.

New York, April 5.—Fears that the steamer Prins Maurits of the Royal Dutch West Indies company line had gone down, possibly with all on board, were expressed in a wireless message received from the steamer Algonquin, which went to the aid of the Prins Maurits, reported in distress off Cape Hatteras.

The message from the Algonquin said the last heard from the Prins Maurits were the words, "Sinking fast." The Algonquin's message added: "No later news was received from her, but all hands are supposed to have perished."

The Prins Maurits, which left New York for West Indian ports, carried only four passengers. She was commanded by Captain H. J. Vandergoot. The steamer is of 1,328 net tonnage, 285 feet long, 38 feet beam and about 20 feet depth. She was built in Hamburg in 1900. The passengers who sailed on the Prins Maurits were Mrs. F. T. Wallace of Philadelphia, Mr. and Mrs. C. Miot of Haiti and a Mrs. L. Roche of Wilmington, Del. The Prins Maurits, it was said by officers of the ship, carried a crew of from 40 to 45 men.

The coast storm claimed ten vessels.

The wind during the storm averaged sixty miles an hour, and at one time attained a velocity of more than seventy miles. # SWOBODA VICTIM OF CONSPIRACY?

New York, April 5.—Raymond Swoboda was pictured as the victim of a business conspiracy rigged by a grafters' ring which has been cheating France of thousands and tens of thousands of dollars on war supplies, by Robert K. McLea, at one time textile expert for the federal tariff board and one of the American group for whom Swoboda went abroad. Mr. MacLea said:

"I am now absolutely convinced of Swoboda's innocence of the charge of causing the fire on La Touraine. The details of the case I do not feel that I ought to discuss pending the state department's own investigation which has been begun.

"It has been established that Swoboda was born in San Francisco, as he stated in applying for his passport. Any accusation founded on the theory that he is a German spy is vitiated at the outset by that simple fact. This young man, with long established relations with French bankers of the first rank, believed that the present war was certain to be considerably prolonged. He foresaw a remarkable opportunity for American manufacturers in France."

FOREIGNERS MUST DIG IN THEIR POCKETS

Villa's Latest Action Disturbs Official Washington.

Washington, April 5.—Serious trouble may be provoked between the Villa authorities at Monterey and the American and other foreign residents of that city, according to reports reaching Washington, as a result of the attempts to get large sums of money from the foreign as well as Mexican business men.

Advices received here indicate that a second forced contribution has been demanded of the business men by the Villistas. The first was asked for in the name of the "poor," but it is reported that the second forced contribution is designated openly as a war loan. It is said that the funds of both the loans for the "poor" and the "war loans" are devoted to identical purposes, both going for the purchase of munitions of war, with only a small margin for the poor.

Villa personally imposed the first contribution for the poor and informed the foreigners that they would have to pay just the same as the Mexicans. Protests from the American and British governments, however, resulted in the foreigners being exempted.

It is now proposed by the Villistas that no one shall be exempted from the payment of the war loan. This is certain to evoke fresh protests from Washington. Owing to the difficulties of communication between here and Monterey it is thought likely that to get word to Consul Hanna will require considerable time.

Dispatches thus far received about the situation at Monterey are very meager, owing to the censorship and the telegraphic difficulties. The last report received here stated that the Germans at Monterey were paying the war loan but that the Americans and Britons have refused thus far.

AUSTRIANS TO RETAIN TRENT

You cannot do good work while your bowels are sluggish or your liver torpid. Wm. O. E. Bielke, Mgr. Scott Hotel, Hancock, Mich., says: "I gave Foley Cathartic Tablets a thorough trial, and find them a mild but safe cathartic." Foley Cathartic Tablets never gripe or cause nausea. They do away with that drowsy, dull feeling and are wholesome, cleansing and healthful. Most satisfactory for stout persons. Blackmer & Tanquary.

BUSINESS IS IMPROVING

Washington, April 5.—Secretary of Commerce Redfield has been submitting daily reports to President Wilson for the past week regarding business conditions and the evidences discernible of renewed activity in the industrial world. # BILLY SUNDAY IN NEW JERSEY

Paterson, N. J., April 5.—A crowd that packed the tabernacle heard Rev. Billy Sunday's first sermon yesterday. # SALOONS STILL DOING BUSINESS

London, April 5.—A dispatch from Glasgow shows that the recent report that the people there were forsaking the saloons for the tea rooms was untrue. The declarations of the king and Lord Kitchener have deeply impressed the Clyde workers, but there are no noticeable signs that the abstinence announcement of the sovereign and the secretary of war will be followed.

DUTCH STEAMER IS MISSING

Believed to Have Foundered Off Cape Hatteras With All Hands—Last Wireless Message Reported Boat as Sinking Fast—Carried Crew of Forty Men and Four Passengers—Craft Destroyed Elsewhere.

New York, April 5.—Fears that the steamer Prins Maurits of the Royal Dutch West Indies company line had gone down, possibly with all on board, were expressed in a wireless message received from the steamer Algonquin, which went to the aid of the Prins Maurits, reported in distress off Cape Hatteras.

The message from the Algonquin said the last heard from the Prins Maurits were the words, "Sinking fast." The Algonquin's message added: "No later news was received from her, but all hands are supposed to have perished."

The Prins Maurits, which left New York for West Indian ports, carried only four passengers. She was commanded by Captain H. J. Vandergoot. The steamer is of 1,328 net tonnage, 35 feet long, 35 feet beam and about 30 feet depth. She was built in Hamburg in 1900. The passengers who sailed on the Prins Maurits were Mrs. F. T. Wallace of Philadelphia, Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Miot of Haiti and a Mrs. La Roche of Wilmington, Del. The Prins Maurits, it was said by officers of the line, carried a crew of from 40 to 45 men.

times in the vicinity of the Delaware capes. They were the crews of the Consolidation Coal company's barges Nos. 6 and 9, bound from Baltimore for Boston with coal, and were drowned when their crafts foundered near Cape Henlopen and went to pieces in the gale.

The tug Edward Luckenbach sank off False cape. Sixteen of the crew of eighteen men are reported lost.

The wind during the storm averaged fifty miles an hour, and at one time attained a velocity of more than seventy miles. Coast guards and life-savers from the Lewes and Rehoboth stations made repeated efforts to launch a lifeboat when the plight of the barges was discovered, but they found it impossible to get through the rolling surf.

SWOBODA VICTIM OF CONSPIRACY?

New York, April 5.—Raymond Swoboda was pictured as the victim of a business conspiracy rigged by a grafters' ring which has been cheating France of thousands and tens of thousands of dollars on war supplies, by Robert K. McLea, at one time textile expert for the federal tariff board and one of the American group for whom Swoboda went abroad. Mr. MacLea said:

"I am now absolutely convinced of Swoboda's innocence of the charge of causing the fire on La Touraine. The details of the case I do not feel that I ought to discuss pending the state department's own investigation which has been begun."

"It has been established that Swoboda was born in San Francisco, as he stated in applying for his passport. Any accusation founded on the theory that he is a German spy is vitiated at the outset by that simple fact. This young man, with long established relations with French bankers of the first rank, believed that the present war was certain to be considerably prolonged. He foresaw a remarkable opportunity for American manufacturers in France."

GREAT DEBATE

TUESDAY NIGHT

Tuesday and Wednesday the annual Fayette County Sunday School Convention will be held at the Presbyterian church in this city, and one of the leading features of the meeting will be the unique debate, Tuesday night, between E. J. Hall and D. C. Summers, of Colorado.

The Hall-Summers dialogue-debate has proven the feature of every convention where it has been given, and while it keeps the audience in an uproar as a result of the mirth-provoking puns of the debaters, it carries a strong and convincing argument with it.

Mr. Hall takes the part of Tom O'Neil, a saloonkeeper, at the Excise Commissioner's office, paying his annual saloon license fee. The Irish brogue which Mr. Hall uses in the typical vernacular of the Old Sod, and always keeps the audience amused. His story of how he became a saloonkeeper is full of pathos. His climax, when upbraided by the Excise Commissioner for the ruination he has wrought, is a most powerful piece of vitriolic eloquence.

The Presbyterian church is expected to be packed tomorrow night when the debate is given.

Rev. F. E. Ross, of this city, recently heard the two men in Columbus, and pronounces the dialogue-debate one of the most interesting and instructive debates on the liquor question that he has ever heard.

CHIEF OF POLICE

ISSUES A WARNING

The police department has been informed that young men, after attending services at the Gregg street church Sunday night, disturbed, in several places, the bricks piled along North street for the improvement, throwing them out into the street. Besides, a list of the names of those implicated has been furnished.

Chief Moore stated Monday morning that unless apology is made he will bring the entire crowd up in police court.

LAI'D TO REST WITH

SIMPLE SERVICES

Virginia, the young daughter of Mrs. Bertha Thompson, of Dayton, was laid to rest in the Washington cemetery, after Rev. P. J. Henness had conducted tender services at the home of the aunt, Mrs. John Davis.

The East End choir furnished the music. It was an affecting sight to see the little flower covered casket borne out by six little girls. Beautiful floral tributes were sent by friends in Dayton and this city.

Mrs. Thompson and two daughters, Mr. Clinton Robinette and family returned to Dayton Saturday evening.

FAYETTE VIRTUALLY FREE FROM FEDERAL QUARANTINE

The quarantine, imposed upon Fayette county November 7th, when the foot and mouth disease made its appearance in this county, was lifted Sunday, so that now live stock from Fayette can be shipped to any part of the country, and the only restriction is the shipping of live stock into this county from other states where there is likelihood of infection existing.

During the several months in which the quarantine has been in force, Fayette county farmers have suffered considerable inconvenience and loss, but the quarantine officials are of the opinion that the disease has been completely stamped out in the county, and that no further loss will occur. Only one herd was slaughtered in the county—that of John Perrill, near Selden.

Included with Fayette are the counties of Belmont, Champaign, Darke, Fulton, Putnam, Shelby and Wyandot.

SCRUBS PUT IT OVER REGULARS

THREE HUNDRED FANS WITNESS PRACTICE GAME AT ATHLETIC PARK—SEVEN PITCHERS HAVE FLING AND GOOD MATERIAL SHOWS UP—CORWIN AND RUNNELS STILL STRONG WITH THE STICK.

Three hundred fans crowded the grandstand and bleachers at Athletic park Sunday, and saw the scrubs put over the regulars to the tune of 26 to 13. The game was more for practice than blood, and both teams were made up from the Athletic staff.

Seven pitchers occupied the slab at various times, with a good indication of an A-1 twirling corps this season. The material in the outfield strengthened the hope for a prosperous season.

Corwin and Runnels, as of old, led in the pelting, each getting three clean hits.

The lineups were as follows: Regulars—Hagerty, c; Hickman, Buchanan, Corwin and Runnels, p; Noon, 1b; Runnels, 2b; Corwin, ss; Reed, 3b; Mobley, lf; Jones cf; Walton, rf. Scrubs—Woods, c; Cotterill, Reno, Linson, p; Smith; 1b; Reno, Cotterill, 2b; Pine, ss; McAllister, 3b; Whited, lf; Ross, cf; Linson, Lewis, rf. Umpire, Waites.

The opening game of the season will be next Sunday against the Springfield Elites at Athletic Park.

AUTO TAKES CURB ON WEST COURT

What nearly terminated in a serious accident occurred on West Court street at eight o'clock Saturday night, when Mr. J. Howard Hicks, well known architect, Rev. A. W. West and Capt. Vincent were badly shaken up when Mr. Hicks' car struck the curb and came to a stop against a phone pole.

There was no light at the intersection of Circle avenue and Court street, and as Mr. Hicks slowed down to turn into Circle avenue, the lights on his machine dimmed, and instead of entering Circle avenue the machine hit the curb.
